As the Emerald Airport keeps soaring as one of the Central Highlands council's strongest performing assets, it will have to go on without asset manager Salomon Kloppers, who has resigned.

At his last report to council on 22 March, Mayor Kerry Hayes paid tribute to the value of Mr Kloppers' work during his tenure at the airport.

"In his time here, he clearly accepts challenges in a space that is probably one of the most commercial spots in this business and a very forward-facing one and a very significant piece of infrastructure, and clearly the level of management and administration is really important," Cr Hayes said.

Inland Central Queensland had a lot to celebrate last week when the first train rolled out of the Seaway terminal at CQ Inland Port marking a major milestone for economic growth and development for the region.

Jamie Kennedy from Seaway at the CQ Inland Port at Yamala said Seaways's new terminal showcases their commitment to growth in regional communities.

"The Emerald facility represents the very first inland port in Queensland handling export and import containers," he said.

"This is a game changer for local growers, traders, and business operators."

The Central Highlands Regional Coucil will go to public consultation to reveal its plans for region's water security.

Infrastructure and Utilities manager Amber Robinson said version one of the water security strategy and water security action plan 2022-2041 was a vital move by the council to confront a changing climate and water scarcity.

"Particularly in a region like this," she said.

"We need to ensure that we have a plan in place and understand whwere we can source our water from and what to do when we can't.

"This sets the scene as the first overarching strategy which will have a number of subplans that are currently being developed."

Ms Robinson said at the heart of it was the question - could the council source the water needed to service the Central Highlands population into the future?

"We have done a lot of work in the background... and now we feel we are ready to go to the community for a second round of community consultations," she said.

The streets of Springsure were eerily quiet on Wednesday mid-morning.

On a day when the Governor of Queensland Dr Jeannette Young was in town and obviously revelling in her time outdoors surrounded by the region's spectacular scenery, the normal flow of traffic down Eclipse St and its surrounds was at a trickle.

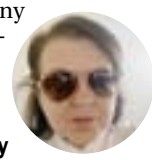

It soon became apparent why.

Streets surrounding the town's hipptop Anglican church were parked out by the hundreds of mourners as they came to pay their last respects to 'Aunty Col', a true Springsure district icon.

Even though the service was livestreamed for those unable to attend, the church was at capacity and a gentle breeze kept temperatures down.

A pioneering woman in every aspect and a friend to so many, Colleen McLaughlin died at the age of 95.

The Springsure Working Horse Association is hosting a weekend campdraft and set aside time on 2 April for Aunty Col's Gymkhana where kids compete for fun and lollies and any money raised will be donated to the Springsure Pony Club, of which Colleen was a life member.

As the Emerald Airport keeps soaring as one of the Central Highlands council's strongest performing assets, it will have to go on without asset manager Salomon Kloppers, who has resigned.

At his last report to council on 22 March, Mayor Kerry Hayes paid tribute to the value of Mr Kloppers' work during his tenure at the airport.

"In his time here, he clearly accepts challenges in a space that is probably one of the most commercial spots in this business and a very forward-facing one and a very significant piece of infrastructure, and clearly the level of management and administration is really important," Cr Hayes said.

"I guess it's the Holy Grail for councillors to talk amongst themselves about projects being delivered under budget and on time.

"It's not supposedly a Xanadu, but it is something we strive to achieve regularly, but on the projects that you had undertaken, you not only project managed them, but the whole team that work with you certainly know their responsibilities and can enjoy those challenges as well."

Cr Hayes said Mr Kloppers' legacy was one of being a "good, productive member of this team".

He praised his ability to instill his team with the skills needed to do their jobs as well as the mentoring role he'd played.

"I hope I am being prophetic, but there's always a door open back at your home in the Central Highlands," Cr Hayes said.

Mr Kloppers said the time spent in Emerald with his family was something he would never forget.

"The impact on what it will have on the future, on the life of my son, cannot be underestimated," he said.

"That goes for the schools, the people; everyone would do this over again.

"I guess we all have limited time and if you look at something and go 'oh, I'll do this again', that's probably the highest praise you can give something.

"The rest of what I have to say is drivel, and I will end up crying."

Cr Charlie Brimblecombe, Mayor Kerry Hayes, Salomon Kloppers and Paul Bell at an inspection of the Emerald Airport runway in 2019.

Council's Finance Manager Helen Kirby said the airport's strong recovery since May, 2022, continued.

"Year to date revenue (is) exceeding forecasts with the operating results of $2.4 million recorded at the end of the reporting period (28 February)," Mrs Kirby said.

Meeting minutes from the Emerald Airport Advisory Committee meeting held on 27 February noted operating revenue was 24 per cent higher than expected with all revenue streams contributing to the positive result.

"Head tax is up 26 per cent, security tax up 24 per cent, car parking up 30 per cent and plane landing up 16 per cent," the minutes stated.

"Operating expenses are nine per cent lower than expected.

"Passenger numbers of 118,116 to the end of January are 22 per cent higher than budget and up by 36 per cent last year."

If passenger numbers continue to increase, operators will consider opening the cafe on weekends.

Paying parking patrons of 12,651 were 25 per cent higher than exptected, and 26 per cent higher than last year.

The airport has submitted a capital budget application to replace the current failing carpark lights.

A consultant, Delos Delta Pty Ltd, has been hired to conduct an airport business review.

But Bonza won't be touching down at Emerald Airport any time soon, so any thoughts of budget airfares remain pie in the sky.

At the 27 February meeting, Councillor Gai Sypher asked the question about the budget carrier's ability to service Emerald.

"Emerald runway infrastructure would be unable to accommodate an aircraft of that size in the long term without impacting the life of the runway," the minutes noted.

For Rees, it's all about 'shaving' lives

By Nelli Saarinen

Rees Thomas is known around The Gemfields for his long locks and big beard, but he shaved it all off to raise money for leukemia patients at the Rubyvale Hotel on Friday, 18 March.

At 70 years old, Mr Thomas is lucky to have his health, but many around him haven't been as fortunate.

"I've had many friends die of cancer, I have one mate who has prostate cancer now. It's all around me," he said.

"My mate was supposed to be coming up to see me but he had a relapse on his prostate. I thought I should do something.

"I haven't heard much about what you can do for prostate cancer, but then I remembered Shave Week."

Every year during Shave Week, the Leukemia Foundation encourages Aussies to shave, cut or colour their hair to raise funds for charity.

Now known as World's Greatest Shave, the initiative celebrates its 25th anniversary in 2023, making it one of Australia's longest running fundraising events.

Mr Thomas decided to approach the New Royal Hotel Rubyvale to organise a fundraiser.

"I wanted to get more people and more exposure for the cause," he said.

"The new hotel owners have been a godsend here in the Gemfields because they embrace anything and everything. So I thought, 'why not ask them?'"

Mr Thomas expected to raise somewhere around $500, but the shave and charity raffle ended up raising more than $3500.

"It's fantastic," Mr Thomas said.

He said he is enjoying his new hairstyle.

"When you shave all your hair and your beard, nobody knows you. Walking into the hotel, nobody recognised me. It was funny.

"Before, people thought I was only 50. When I did the shave, one lady said I look 10 years younger, so now I must look 40.

A self-described optimist, Mr Thomas hopes to set an example for others to help those around them.

"They've never done World's Greatest Shave here before, yet there are so many old people out here dying of some sort of cancer," he said.

"Challenge on, see if somebody else will do it next year.

"I'm a donor of all my organs too. I'm healthy, so if something happens, have all my organs. I don't care.

"I'm one of those people, if I can give blood, give something to somebody, I go for it."

Rees Thomas wants to challenge others to step up and help.

Rees Thomas was known for his long hair and beard before shaving it off for charity.

Tapping into security

The Central Highlands Regional Coucil will go to public consultation to reveal its plans for region's water security.

Infrastructure and Utilities manager Amber Robinson said version one of the water security strategy and water security action plan 2022-2041 was a vital move by the council to confront a changing climate and water scarcity.

"Particularly in a region like this," she said.

"We need to ensure that we have a plan in place and understand whwere we can source our water from and what to do when we can't.

"This sets the scene as the first overarching strategy which will have a number of subplans that are currently being developed."

Ms Robinson said at the heart of it was the question - could the council source the water needed to service the Central Highlands population into the future?

"We have done a lot of work in the background... and now we feel we are ready to go to the community for a second round of community consultations," she said.

"The purpose of this community consultation is to inform, to educate, to close that initial feedback loop and build some confidence that we would have a strategy in place... we've got a plan for our future."

Pillar 2 of the water strategy is to negotiate with Sunwater to secure additional water allocations for Comet, Emerald and Springsure, population growth dependent, and collate a planning report to identify all future alternative water sources for Capella.

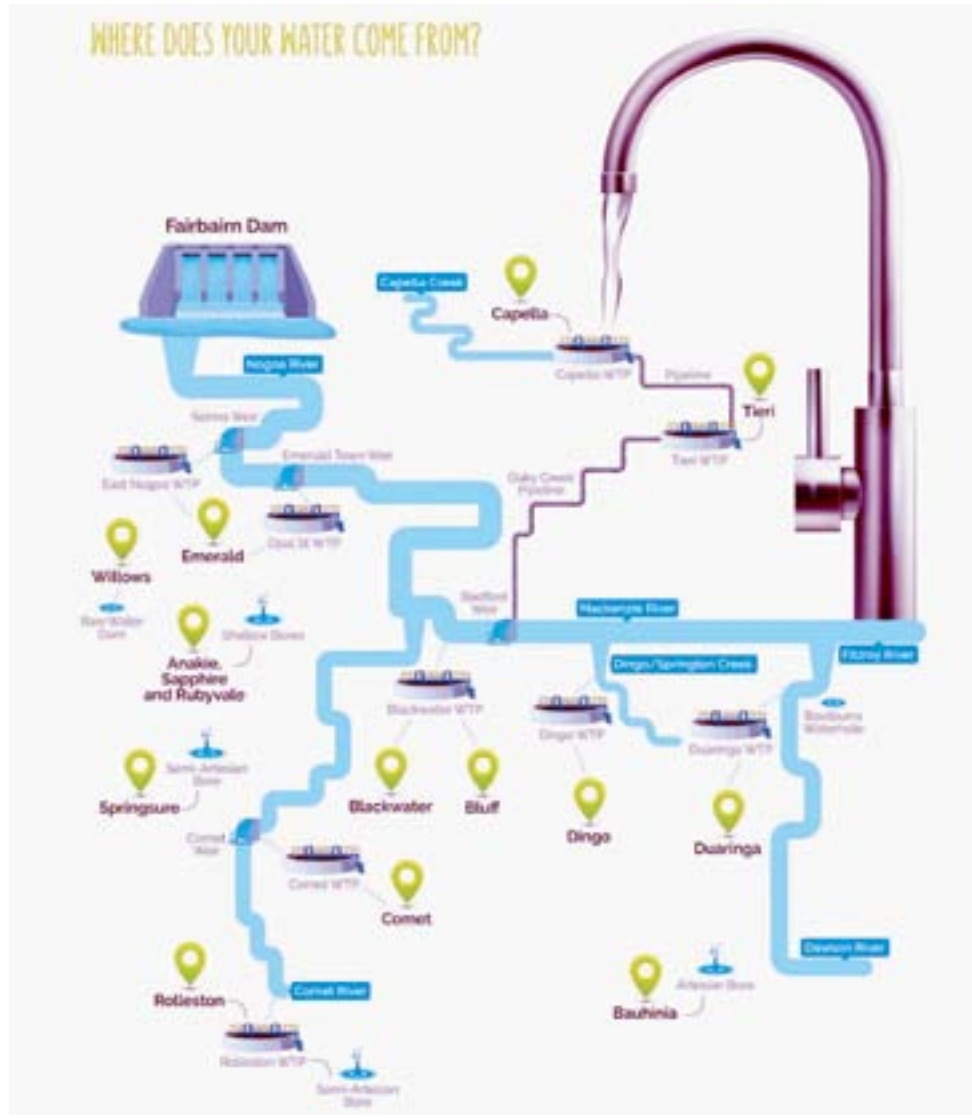

Under Pillar 4, it is proposed to replace the Tieri to Capella pipeline, as well as the Blackwater to Bluff pipeline by June, 2028.

The council will also investigate and plan for automated flood harvesting for Capella, Rolleston and Dingo.

Upgrades for water treatment plants at Capella, Comet, Duaringa, Blackwater and Emerald's Opal Streets by June, 2028, fall under Pillar 4.

Pillar 3 is the improved monitoring of water sources and would see stream gauges installed in the Capella catchment, Rolleston offtake and Springton Creek offtake with data sent to council's SCADA system.

Anakie, Bauhinia, Sapphire, Rubyvale, Rolleston, Springsure and The Willows have insufficient long-term groundwater monitoring data available to establish water reliability.

Comet has been identified as the one town in the Central Highlands whose current water source reliability at the Comet River weir (53 per cent) could drop drastically to 28 per cent by 2041.

It is proposed to cart water during periods of drought.

The council will activate water restrictions across its towns when water sources reach adopted trigger levels.

Water conservation will form part of a community strategy to manage water source shortfalls during dry years.

Homes push

The State Government will install rapid construction prefabricated homes for employees in Capella and Lochington as part of its $519.2 million Government Employee Housing construction package that will build 439 homes over the next five years to house 550 frontline workers.

The prefabricated house frames, bathroom modules and flat-packed kitchens are emerging from the QBuild Rapid Construction Accommodation and Apprenticeship Centre, opened by Premier Annastasia Palazczuk on Monday, 27 March.

Many residences will become homes for government employees across regional Queensland, such as teachers, nurses, and police officers.

"These state-of-the-art factory-built houses for our frontline workers are critical to delivering essential services to regional Queenslanders, while easing the pressure on rental markets," the Premier said. "Our government is committed to pulling every lever, and looking at every option, to address the Queensland housing challenge. This facility will deliver new homes for our frontline nurses, teachers, and police in regional and remote Queensland, along with safe, affordable and appropriate social housing for the community's most vulnerable."

The modular units and homes will be built at the QBuild factory and then transported to where they're needed across the state. Unhindered by bad weather, the production-line style factory can pre-prepare the frames, kitchens and bathrooms for transport while work on site is underway. The components can even be stored away ready to be quickly shipped around the state to provide fully built homes, ready for a new family in a matter of weeks.

By the end of the year, 93 builds are expected to be completed.

This year's program also includes 12 homes each for Winton and Texas, eight for Blackhall, six for Wondai, three each for Inglewood, Tambo and Mornington Island, two each in St George and Surat and one each in Alpha, Augathella, Bedourie, Birdsville, Bloomfield, Capella, Charleville, Coen, Croydon, Gayndah, Injune, Julia Creek, Kilcummin, Lochington, Marlborough, Mitchell, Mount Morgan, Taroom, Thargomindah and Westmar.

CH council finances on track for year end

By Di Stanley

In the countdown to the end of the financial year, the Central Highlands Regional Council's operating surplus is $4 million up on expectation.

Finance manager Helen Kirby told councillors the surplus stood at $35.9m at 28 February against the budgeted $31.9m, reflecting the levy of the second half rates notices.

Mrs Kirby said the council's original adopted budget of $237.6m had been revised upwards to $152.1m, including operating expenses of $176.8m and a capital works program of $67.5m with repayment of borrowings for the year totalling $5.8m.

Capital works stood at low 26 per cent.

"The low percentage of actual capital expenditure at 26 per cent or the budget year is due mainly to the impact that rain has had on commencement and progress of infrastructure projects," Mrs Kirby said.

"Additionally, seven other large projects have been impacted by delays in the supply of goods from suppliers.

Councillor Megan Daniels queried if all the budgeted capital works would be able to be completed before June 30.

"The budget review process that we're going through has identified a few projects that due to delay of materials and delays with starts will roll over into next year," Infrastructure and Utilities General Manager Jason Houlihan replied.

"We're just going through the process of re-forecasting the expenditure based on those projects."

"When commitments are combined with actual expenditure at the end of the reporting period, the percentage of capital expenditure does increase from 26 per cent to 61 per cent."

The council's cash holdings stood at $87m against total borrowings of $68m.

Josh shares a quiet moment with Macy Tasker, one of three vocalists selected to shine in Capella Country Life.

Country living's a charm

By Di Stanley

Josh Arnold and the Capella kids and locals who answered the call to come to the undercover arena last Friday afternoon to shoot the final scene for the video to accompany the song Capella Country Life.

Capella kids know they're blessed to grow up roaming free in their big sky bush backyard.

And they were keen to show it off when Small Town Culture musician Josh Arnold visited to channel that community spirit and collaborate with the kids to create the new town anthem, Capella Country Life.

"I just know from having been to so many, country people are who they are and they're just so proud of their little towns and little communities," Josh said.

"They're often close-knit and I'm never surprised at these kids with how much they love their life and I think in most parts, they know how lucky they are."

Josh hooked up with Capella State School for the project and he was elated at the wealth of talent he unearthed in auditions. Of the school children who auditioned to record major singing roles in Capella Country Life, Josh selected Year 4 student Saidah Kesselly, Macy Tasker (Year 5) and Year 6 student Brooke Auld.

Capella State School principal Christie Minns summed up Josh's time in the town with four simple words – "wow, what a week".

"It was just infectious - magic," Mrs Minns said.

"It was wonderful because all week we had lots of different kids doing lots of different things, so every child should have their face popup at some point in the video.

"We had the pony club involved, the acro, the footy, the swimming, the motorbikes, the cattle properties and then each class got to do little segments as well."

Mrs Minn credited P and C treasurer Rachael Cruwys as the driving force behind the Small Town Culture project.

"The P and C actually applied for a CHRC grant to fund the project, so they have been instrumental in getting it happening out here for us," Mrs Minns said.

"Rachael was looking after Josh for the week after-hours, and she did the schedule to get him everywhere he needed to be."

Josh said Rachael's enthusiasm for the project was nothing short of "incredible".

"She just loves her community, loves Capella and wanted to get me there to show it to me and for me to do what I do so that it can be shown to everyone," he said.

The song and video will be launched at the official opening of the school's new administration centre and community hub sports centre in the next school term.

"The community hub building was funded through the local bowls club that gave us $132,000 six or seven years ago and I was successful in getting a grant to complete the project," Mrs Minns said.

"So we got a brand new million dollar community hub sports buildings that was part-funded by the community here in Capella."

Education Minister Grace Grace will be invited to attend the opening. As for Josh, he's off on more Small Town Culture adventures, virtually fully booked through to the year's end.

"As a job, I guess I'm really privileged," he said.

"It's like a hobby and I don't have the pressure of depending on having to write a hit song for myself.

"It's freedom but it's also exhausting, but in a good way because I put everything I have into it.

"I know every town and community and school wants their song and video to be amazing, so the pressure is on me to make it is, yeah."

Vandals find their political voice with vulgar message

Flynn MP Colin Boyce prides himself on driving the vast network of electorate roads to get a feel for every pothole and pitfall, and the last thing he'd want to be accused of is causing driver distraction.

But that's what has happened with the discovery last Friday, 24 March, that his billboard just outside Gracemere had been defaced with a slur on his intellect.

Mr Boyce's response was simply that more needs to be done to tackle out-of-control crime.

"But the Queensland Government doesn't seen to think there's an issue," he said on his official social media page.

"Criminals are leaving residents feeling fearful and violated as homes continue to be broken into and cars stolen at an alarming rate." Social media supporters quickly chimed in.

"Keep your chin up keep doing your great work that means you're being heard," posted one.

"The wording on the sign is purely a reflection of how this individual sees themselves," commented another.

"At least the twerps can spell," said one wag, followed by another who posted: "I'm surprised they got the spelling right, oh the loony left".

It was pointed out that the sign was close to a State Labour stronghold in Rockhampton as possible motivation for the vandalism .

Possibly the best advice?

"Get that sign painted over asap."

Vandals got the spray paint out to deface Colin Boyce's roadside billboard near Gracemere.

The Seaway team were thrilled to see the first train roll out of the CQ Inland Port.

Train game changer

By Trish Bowman

Inland Central Queensland had a lot to celebrate last week when the first train rolled out of the Seaway terminal at CQ Inland Port marking a major milestone for economic growth and development for the region.

Jamie Kennedy from Seaway at the CQ Inland Port at Yamala said Seaways's new terminal showcases their commitment to growth in regional communities.

"The Emerald facility represents the very first inland port in Queensland handling export and import containers," he said.

"Built and designed to service the Central Queensland region, the new facility can quality test, store, pack and ship export chickpeas, sorghum, wheat and will transport many other products such as farming and mining materials direct to the Port of Brisbane.

"This is a game changer for local growers, traders, and business operators."

CQ Inland Port General Manager Alan Stent-Smith said the CQ Inland Port is a work in progress that is definitely a game changer for the region.

"This is a prime example in improving efficiency and is ideally positioned to establish a larger range of industry and growth," he said.

"We are ideally positioned just 27km from town and working 24/7 opening the door for commodities to be freighted to and from the south east corner.

"I am a farmer as well and to give you an example of the improved efficiency of the Inland freight, to transport chickpea from our farm to Narrabri it was costing us $96 per tonne. "Using the inland port option costs $13 per tonne. Now that we have a packing plant operated by Seaway for chick pea, wheat, sorghum and other commodities and the inland transport option, we have the opportunity to continue to increase economic growth for the region."

Mr Stent-Smith said the only piece of the puzzle missing now investment in water infrastructure by all tiers of government.

A sea of containers ready to roll.

"We have already installed road, power and a transformer tower, what we need now to complete the investment in the region is investment into pipeline water infrastructure," he said.

"Prior to the last election Barnaby Joyce announced that funds would be allocated in the budget for water infrastructure to the site. Unfortunately, that did not come to fruition.

"We have a $25 million crushing plant planned for the site in the coming months and they will need water.

"To continue to expand the efficiency of the site we now need the government to re-budget for this vital commodity.

"Including water infrastructure on site is the next step to expand the ability for more industry to take advantage of the opportunity to improve the services this site offers.

"In the scheme of things, a $12 million pipeline is a small tip in the bucket for the potential of huge economic gain for the region.

"The site is zoned and promoted for mixed industry; industry needs a reliable water source.

"Just add water and watch it grow."

Asbestos removal from water tower

The asbestos-ridden roof sheeting of the Blackwater water tower at Lions Park will be replaced with corrugated zincalum when maintenance works are completed by the Central Highlands Regional Council.

A spokesperson said the defect was uncovered during routine maintenance work on the 50-year-old structure recently when the water tower was due for an inspection according to the council's asset maintenance schedule.

"The entire roof sheeting contains asbesto working out at approximately 180sq m," the spokesperson said. "The work will take approximately two weeks to complete."

The works window for removal of the asbestos is from now until Thursday, 6 April.

An exclusion zone is required due to the asbestos removal. The public space will be inaccessible for the construction period and no park bookings can be made during this time.

Governor falls for region

Sporty students from Springsure, Rolleston, Gindie, Orion and the school of distance education were the picture of health as they were greeted by Queensland Goveror Dr Jeannette Young on Wednesday, 29 March.

Accompanied by her husband Professor Graeme Nimmo, the Vice Regal couple was at the Springsure Golf Club for the District Cross Country Day where students competed over 2km and 3km courses, darting around the greens of the picturesque facility.

The Governor was warmly welcomed by Springsure State School school leaders as she took in the beauty of the backdrop that was the Virgin Rock.

"I'm glad to see you're being active," she told the sea of avid young faces in front of her, shaded by a marquee.

She also took the time to remind the students of the importance of homework. Then it was time to step up and start the cross country racing.

Earlier in the day, the Governor had official engagements in the town including a visit to the Mobile Dental Unit of the Royal Flying Doctor Service, of which she and Professor Nimmo are joint Patrons.

Then it was off for a tour of the Springsure Multipurpose Health Service to meet with frontline healthcare workers, in keeping with Her Excellency's pledge to visit every public hospital and health service in Queensland during her tenure.

Not only did the Vice-Regal couple receive the warmest of welcomes on the Springsure State School sign in the middle of town, but they were farewelled by a team of drovers from Sam and Lizzie Bradford's property Arcturus Downs working the long paddock to bring cattle to the Springsure Showgrounds for a weekend campdraft as they headed down the Gregory Highway to board a plane at Emerald Airport.

The Governor was due to tour Emerald Hospital but it was dropped from her itinerary. Her three-day tour of the Banana Shire and Central Highlands region also took in Mount Morgan, Biloela and Moura.

Banana Mayor Nev Ferrier escorted the Vice Regal couple on a tour of Biloela Hospital while they later met with schools and community groups. The Governor also went to the Mount Morgan Hospital and Moura Community Hospital.

Council tribute to worker

Young father, Duaringa resident, valued colleague and employee of Central Highlands Regional Council Richard Sheridan 36, lost his life in a workplace incident on Monday 20 March.

The father of two died in an incident near Mulcahys Road in Arcadia Valley about 1.45pm following an incident with a semi-trailer and heavy machinery while they were unloading heavy machinery.

It was a moment of great sadness when Mayor Kerry Hayes opened the General Council Meeting on Wednesday morning with an emotional tribute to Richard, and paid his respects to his family, friends and colleagues followed by a minute of silence taking place in the chambers.

"Richard was a member of our Infrastructure and Utilities team and a valued colleague to all of our organisation," Mayor Hayes said.

"My deepest condolences go out to Richard's wife Tenille, their daughters, his mother Elaine, extended family and the Duaringa community.

"To his immediate family who are supporting Tenille at this very difficult time, to all of his work colleagues, and his workmates, to the community of Duaringa that has lost a young member of their community and are gathered around his family, and to the whole council organisation whether they knew Richard or not, it is a very sad time for us all."

Mayor Hayes said right now, their main focus is supporting the family and staff through this difficult time.

"Council are in touch with Richard's family regarding funeral arrangements and ongoing support," he said.

"Council staff are fully cooperating with the investigation and formal processes as they unfold.

"As an investigation into the incident remains ongoing, there will be no further comments from council at this time.

"Please keep Tenille, their daughters and Richard's family and community in your thoughts and prayers."

Everyone in the council chambers stood to observe a minute's silence for Mr Sheridan, who was educated in Rockhampton at The Cathedral College and was a long-time member of the Australian Workers Union Queensland.

A Workplace Health and Safety Queensland spokesman confirmed an investigation was under way.

Tee off to win a $30k car

By Di Stanley

Tee off on the 17th green at the Emerald Golf Club on 29 April and you could win the keys to a brand new Toyota with a lucky hole in one.

The sixth annual CQ Pet Rescue Charity Golf Day is a major fundraiser for the Emerald-based organisation.

CQ Pet Rescue's dog pound coordinator Hayley Smith, accompanied by Winnie, a foster dog looking for her forever home, said money raised from the golf day would be put toward another free desexing program in the community.

"This is for people who are struggling to pay to get their dog or cat desexed and it will possibly be run mid-year," Hayley said.

"For anyone struggling now to afford this, they are more than welcome to contact us through our Facebook page.

"It is a service we have offered three times now and the aim is to see a decrease in the number of kittens and puppies.

"It's been evident in some years that we haven't run it, that there's been an influx of puppies or kittens as a result."

For long-term supporter Selwyn Nutley, his volunteer fundraising for CQ Pet Rescue is an all-year round affair.

He's known around town as the "can-do" man because it's through collecting cans and bottles to cash in at Containers for Change that he enables the organisation to continue its vital work in the community.

He is on track to contribute around $28,000 to CQ Pet Rescue coffers this year.

"Of course I can tell you about my cans," Selwyn joked.

"I have quite a few containers around town, at hotels and motels and private residences, that I go around collecting and I take them to Containers for Change.

"I'm hoping to have my best year ever this year because I've already got nearly 70,000 cans in three months, which we're really happy about."

CQ Pet Rescue dog pound coordinator Hayley Smith, Winnie and Joel Green from Central Highlands Toyota who is prepared to hand over the keys to a $30,000 car is someone scores a hole in one on the 17th green at the charity golf day.

Selwyn said to keep up the can quota and have that multiply to 280,000 for the year would be "phenomenal".

"It would be a record," he added.

Although beer cans top the list for Selwyn's recyclables, he's finding Emerald drinkers are downing a lot of bottled water and sugar-free beverages.

Hayley said the Central Highlands community was a great supporter of CQ Pet Rescue, from the foster families to the adopters willing to give a rescue animal a better life.

"For me as the dog pound coordinator I go and assess the animals and make sure they will be able to be rehomed with our foster carers," she said.

"I've been doing this for about two years now and I have gotten to see so many beautiful dogs gets homes, sometimes from the very start (at the pound) right through to the very end, and it is rewarding.... and beautiful."

The CQ Pet Rescue Charity Golf Day, April 29, is a three or four-ball ambrose with registrations from 9am and tee-off at 9.30am.

Egg-cellent Easter option

The Easter Bunny will be hopping into Miners Heritage at Rubyvale for its Family Funday celebrations and the opportunity to see some of the Gemfields' most famous sapphires on display on Sunday, 9 April.

Miners Heritage spokeswoman Michelle Jarvis said owners Trudy and Dale 'Bluey' Richardson had purchased the fossicking park business a year ago and were keen to hold the Family Fundays three times annually to showcase the venue, home to Australia's largest walk-in underground sapphire mine, and interact with the Central Highlands community and travelling tourists.

"They want to encourage more people to come out and have a look around and it's something different for the locals as well," Ms Jarvis said.

The Miners Cafe also opened on site this month with an appetising array of all-day offerings made locally on the Gemfields.

"There's fruit juice smoothies, cookies, slices, lamingtons, kids' chicken nuggets, toasties and burgers, chicken or steak and gravy rolls, so there's heaps to choose from," Ms Jarvis said.

"And if you're gluten free or have any special requirements, just ring up and we can tell them what we've got that week."

The Easter Sunday Family Funday is jampacked with entertainment, with face painting, a photo booth, more than 20 market stalls, mine tours, a classic car display, Miners Heritage show bags and $10 gemstone lucky dips.

"The Tomahawk Tiger and Stonebridge Green sapphires will also be on display as part of a collection owned by the Richardson family," Ms Jarvis said.

The Easter Bunny is due to arrive at 11am with some special treats.

There's a jumping castle for the kids.

"I think we have nine of the larger stones ever found on the fields here on display."

The Miners Heritage also sells spectacular locally earth-mined sapphires and jewellery set in yellow and white gold and silver.

Ms Jarvis said parti coloured and teal sapphires had gained in popularity in recent years and sapphires were back in vogue as engagement stones.

"I think that's because there has been so much promotion over the last few years and social media comes into it a lot now," she said.

"And of course, the past two years we've had the Gem Hunters show out here and so more and more people are interested all the time."

The Miners Heritage was established in 1982 as a working sapphire mine before it ventured into tourism two years later.

In 2000, the former owners stopped mining the underground network of 440m of tunnels to concentrate on developing the eight-acre site as a fossicking park and mine tour venture.

Underground, the temperature is a comfortable 22-25 degrees Celsius all-year round.

"People get to see all the different layers of sediment and what you've got to dig through to find the wash layer where the sapphires are living," Ms Jarvis said.

"It's very educational and we actually have a lot of school camps that come through, busloads of kids at a time and they go on the tour and then have a go at fossicking themselves.

"And we have over-50s bus tours that come out and they will do the tour and then have morning tea or lunch and they all seem to enjoy it and have a bit of a laugh.

The Family Funday is on Sunday, 9 April, at the Miners Heritage, Heritage Road, Rubyvale, from 9am-1pm. Food and drink is available on site.

Sunflower Festival is all set to light up the town

By Khrysti Balanay

The Central Highland Easter Sunflower Festival has been a community highlight for the past 47 years, with volunteers working hard to bring the event to life.

Sunflower Festival committee secretary Gail Spargo said the week would feature community favourites, including the art gallery exhibition and sunflower parade.

"The festival has been operating since 1976 when sunflowers were a lot more prevalent in the area," Ms Spargo said.

"In 1984, I believe the festival had its first exchange with Canadian sister city, Altona, who have their own Sunflower Festival.

"Their queen experiences life in the Central Highlands and attends our events, and our queen goes over to Canada for their festival.

"The festival has been going a long time, and although the format may have changed a bit over the years, I think things like the parade have always been a crowd favourite."

Ms Spargo said the Sunflower Festival had two queen and two junior princess entrants this year.

"During their time as an entrant, queens pick a local not-for-profit charity or organisation to fundraise for," she said.

"The junior princesses, aged between 14 and 17, can help the Queens with their fundraising, which helps with experience and exposure.

"Part of the process is to help the girls become a bit more confident, so they go through a round of interviews which helps with that.

"At the speech night later in the week, money raised by the entrants is given to their charities."

Organised by a small committee, the community is welcome to attend the events from Sunday, 2 April, to Sunday, 9 April.

On Saturday, 8 April from 9.30am to 10.30am, roads will be closed for the parade.

The sunflower parade is always a popular event for the entire family.

"Everything is free except for the high tea, as it is one of our fundraisers for the festival," Ms Spargo said.

"On Sunday, 2 April, we will introduce our queen and junior princess entrants and welcome the visiting Canadian Sunflower queen.

"Later on Wednesday, 5 April, we will have entrant speeches, and the art gallery will reopen, where they will have a sunflower-themed collection.

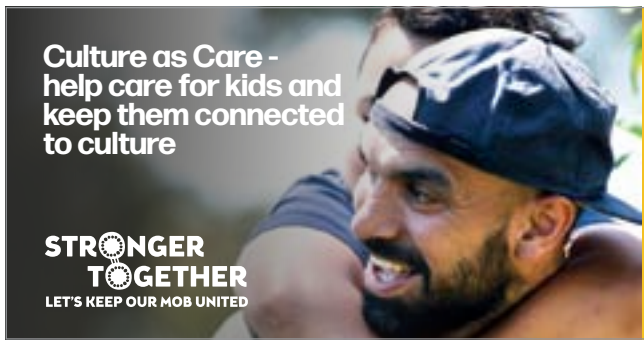

"Our main day is Saturday, 8 April which has the street parade leaving Rundle Park at 9.30am and travelling to the race course.

"There will also be a competition for the kids for the best-decorated bike. They just need to participate in the parade.

"At the race course, there will be free rides for the kids, market stalls, races, and rodeo, and we will crown the queen and junior princess.

"Finally, on Easter Sunday, we have a new event, which we would like feedback on, called Music and Mingle with local performers down at the Emerald Botanic Gardens."

CEO's banking on regions

By Matthew Pearce

ANZ CEO Shayne Elliott visited Central Queensland this week.

ANZ Bank's proposed acquisition of Suncorp Bank will have no impact on Emerald's Egerton St branch, according to ANZ chief executive officer Shayne Elliott.

Mr Elliott dropped into Rockhampton on Monday, 27 March, on a week-long cross-country trip that will also include Brisbane, Sydney and Perth, meeting with ANZ staff and customers, along with group executive for commercial banking Clare Morgan.

"We can read, we can look at data, but nothing really beats being out and about talking to people and getting a sense of what's happening on the ground," he said.

In February, the Senate Rural and Regional Affairs and Transport Committee called on banks to halt the closure of branches in regional areas, launching an inquiry into the impacts of closures across the country.

Mr Elliott said while he understood people's concerns about bank closures and the impact on the local economy, most people he spoke to didn't actually visit their local branch regularly.

"They use digital tools, they want to be able to do their banking on their phone and they don't want to go to the branch unless they really have to," he said.

He said local Suncorp branches would be safe if ANZ's proposed acquisition of Suncorp Bank went ahead.

The acquisition is under review by the Australian Competition and Consumer Commission, with a decision expected to be made in June.

"We've made a commitment, if the acquisition is approved by the regulators, that for the first three years no Suncorp branches will close in Queensland... The reason it's three years and not longer is because we don't know what the future holds," he said.

"We have licensed the Suncorp Bank brand, so all branches will stay the same... with the same colours, the same technology, the same products, for at least five years."

But while customers won't notice anything different immediately, he said ANZ had big plans for the long-term.

"Suncorp Bank has 1.2 million customers and 700,000 of them live in Queensland.. we want to be able to bring the best of ANZ to those customers but in a way that's really convenient," he said.

"We spend a lot more than Suncorp on things like technology and security systems."

While there are issues that are common across Australia, such as inflation and labour shortages, he said there were also specific issues faced by regional towns like those in the Central Highlands with "narrower", less diverse, economies than big cities.

Looking globally, he said the world was in a "war with inflation" impacting most developed economies including Australia.

"Central banks are tasked with bringing that under control and the only way they can really do that in the short term is to increase interest rates fast," he said.

"And when you do that there are casualties, because there are people who may have borrowed too much, or their businesses don't have the ability to pass those cost increases on to their customers."

He said the collapse of Silicon Valley Bank in the United States was unlikely to be replicated in Australia, with the two countries having very different regulations.

"But there's an old saying that goes, when the US sneezes, the rest of the world catches a cold," he said.

"If this does develop further, and there are more banking crises, it will have an impact.

"In order to lend money, Australian banks have to borrow money internationally, and that might become more expensive if there's a high degree of risk in international financial markets.

"And if we have to pay more for the money, it means Australian borrowers might have to pay more as well."

See c-section figures released by government

Fifty-eight women gave birth by c-section at Emerald Hospital in 2022, 18 less than the year beforehand.

Figures about c-sections released by Health Minister Yvette D'Ath earlier this week show 22 women had elective caesareans and 36 were emergencies.

In 2021, there were 24 elective and 52 emergency c-sections at Emerald Hospital.

Callide MP Bryson Head asked Ms D'Ath for information about caesarean section births in the Central Queensland Hospital and Health Service's hospitals, which include Emerald, Gladstone, Rockhampton and Biloela hospitals, as part of a series of questions focusing on the Gladstone and Biloela maternity crisis which continues to see mothers give birth in Rockhampton while the hospitals' maternity units remain on bypass.

He asked the minister to provide the figures all the way back to 2016, reported separately by elective and emergency c-sections by year from 2016 to 2021 and by month for 2022.

In 2020, there were 28 elective and 34 emergency caesareans performed at Emerald Hospital, 25 elective and 33 emergency in 2019, 24 elective and 37 emergency in 2018, 28 elective and 24 emergency in 2017, and 35 elective and 41 emergency in 2016.

As for monthly breakdowns in 2022 for the local hospital, July was the busiest for emergency c-sections, with six surgeries, and October was the busiest for electives, with five surgeries.

October was the busiest month overall in 2022, with a further three emergency caesareans bring the number of surgeries up to eight that month.

Why I say no to the Voice

FROM MY DESK

COLIN BOYCE
FLYNN MP

Colin Boyce in Canberra last week.

The Prime Minister has finally revealed what the Australian people will be asked in the referendum on the Indigenous Voice to Parliament later this year.

I wanted to explain to the Central Highlands community what the Voice proposal is and if successful, how this will affect Australians now and into the future.

As the proposed question has reference to the Executive of government, this makes the body more powerful than any Cabinet Minister.

No Cabinet Minister can apply to the High Court to have legislation struck out because they were not properly consulted. Yet the proposed Voice body will have that power.

More worrying, interpretation of that power will be determined by the High Court, not the Parliament.

The proposed change to the Constitution, will define the rights of Australians based on race.

Recognition of indigenous Australians in the constitutions is one thing. However, for an unelected body to have potential power over all legislation, is something entirely different.

The question remains: as the body will be selected not elected to be the Voice, precisely who will be doing the selection, and could it be against the majority view of indigenous Australians in an area?

This unelected body will have a purview over any legislation that may affect indigenous people, which in Australia is virtually all legislation.

I have consulted widely with both the 'yes' and 'no' campaigns in a respectful way and have made the decision to vote no.

I have contacted indigenous leaders from communities all across the Flynn electorate. Almost all indicated they knew very little or nothing about the Albanese Government's Voice proposal.

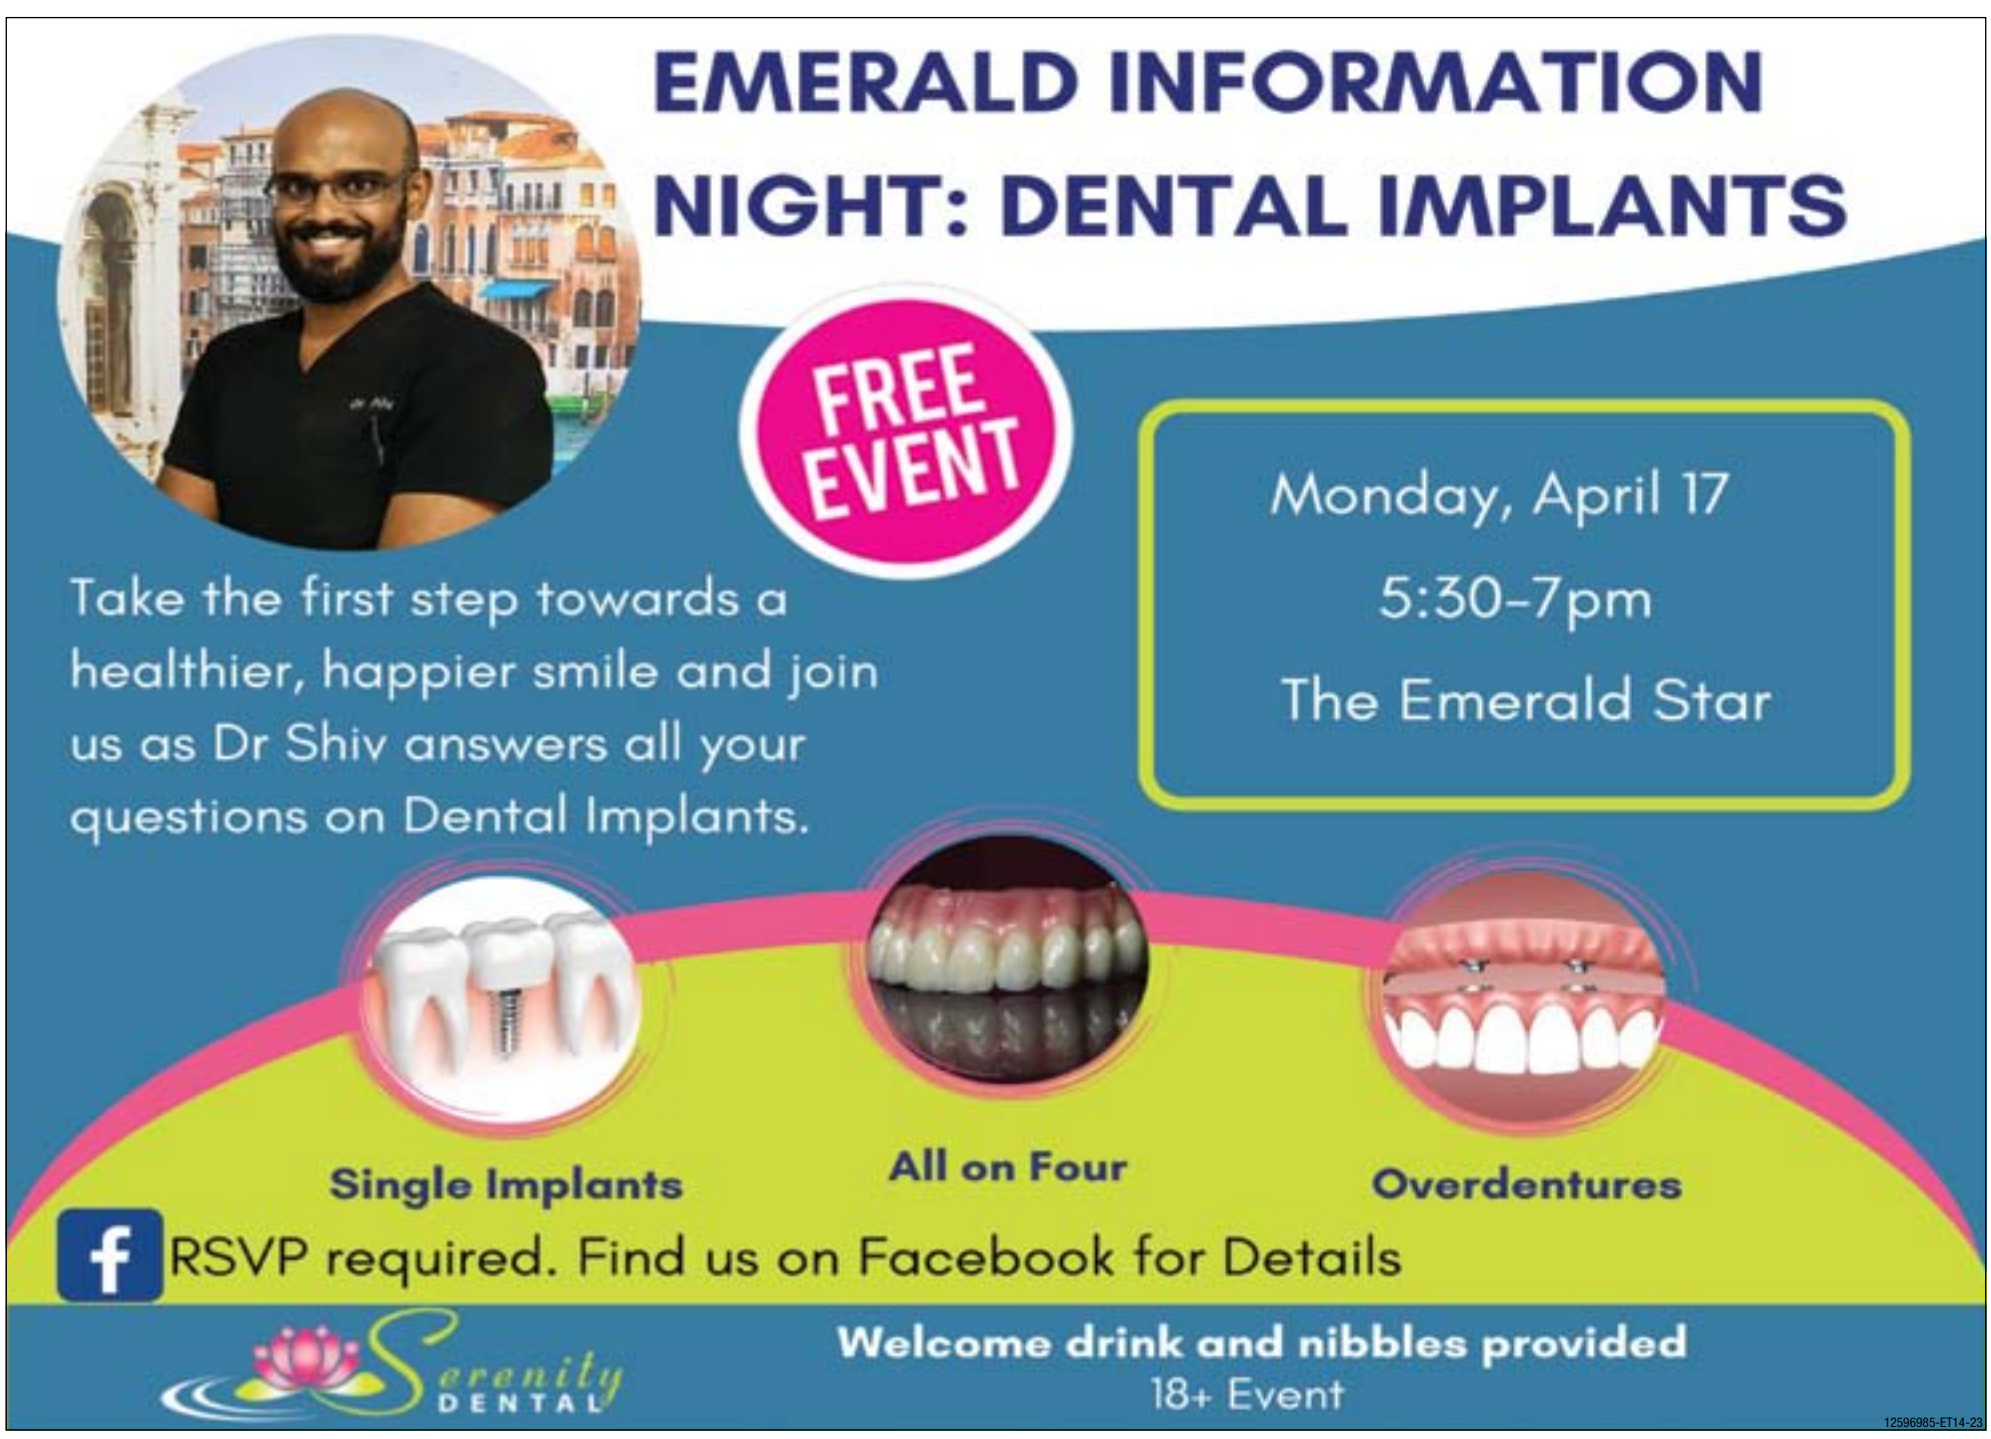

I believe the Voice will not advance the primary aim of Closing the Gap and dealing with real issues. It will not economically empower Indigenous people.

It will be a Voice for Redfern, not Indigenous communities in rural areas such as Woorabinda.

In the 47th Parliament of Australia, there are 11 Indigenous MPs who have been duly and democratically elected by the people, while currently there is an Indigenous Minister for Indigenous Australians who is responsible for overseeing a federal government department that is worth more than $1 billion.

My view remains the same: we are one people, we are one country, we are all equal.

I will be voting no at the referendum and encourage you to have your say.

Tricks of the trade

Filming together in a pandemic brought Selling Houses Australia presenters Andrew Winter, Dennis Scott and Wendy Moore closer than they ever expected. Ahead of the series' 15th season, buyers' advocate Winter and landscaper Scott share their unique bond with Siobhan Duck

On the market: Dennis Scott, Andrew Winter and Wendy Moore help homeowners in Selling Houses Australia; inset, Winter and Scott get to work.

FIFTEEN years at the helm of Selling Houses Australia has enabled Andrew Winter to see just how people around the country really live. Last year was the first time he got the very same intimate insight into his co-star's living habits.

Soon after landscaper Dennis Scott and interior designer Wendy Moore joined the popular Foxtel series – stepping into the void left by outgoing co-hosts Shaynna Blaze and Charlie Albone – and production was upended by Covid-19.

Queenslanders Winter and Scott found themselves marooned in Sydney for almost six months when the borders to their home state slammed shut. While stuck at the same hotel, Winter and Scott began taking daily strolls together to get some respite from staring at the walls of their respective rooms.

"Dennis taught me to walk again," Winter laughs of his daily sojourns with the former NRL star.

"It sounds crazy, but we there wasn't a lot we could do and he's a tall ex-footy player so, of course, when he walks it's fast!

"He said: 'We should walk each day' and I said: 'Okay'.

"The first few days I had no activewear with me, so I was just in my jeans, an overcoat and some boots. It was all a bit hilarious, really. I was literally having to do two steps to his one.

"But by the end of it, I was keeping up with him and I've kept walking as well.

"So, that was something for me that came out of it."

In addition to his walks with Winter, Scott regularly went running with Sydneysider Moore. While pounding the pavement, the two newcomers forged a special bond that has translated into a happy partnership on their TV renovation projects.

Winter believes the pandemic fast-tracked the getting-to-know-you period for the entire cast.

"We sort of crammed in probably five years' worth of work connections in a two-to-three-month period," he laughs.

"We saw that much of each other."

Winter and Scott became so at ease in each other's company after their Sydney experience, that once they were finally permitted back into Queensland, they elected to quarantine together.

"Andrew's family quite graciously moved out of the house so we could stay there [to quarantine] for two weeks," Scott says.

"And while I was living there, I was essentially Andrew's full-time chef/gardener/maintenance man. Now, there's not a lot I don't know about Andrew. I know all about who his best mates were at school in England. And he knows all about me."

As housemates, Scott and Winter were a bit like TV's Odd Couple.

"Or maybe more like the Two Grumpy Men," Scott jokes.

"It's almost like opposites attract. Andrew has a very sarcastic sense of humour and I quite like a bit of sarcasm as well.

"He loves his British dramas. I hadn't seen too many British crime dramas so we sat and watched a fair bit of that stuff [while I was staying at his place on the Gold Coast].

"It was quite interesting because when we were trapped in Sydney, I went over to Andrew's apartment or the NRL Grand Final and lo and behold, halfway through it, Andrew actually started to ask me questions about the football and he is the least sporty person going around."

In addition to discovering his sportier side under Scott's influence, Winter also used his time in isolation to update his real estate licence so he can now work as a buyer's advocate.

Having begun working as an agent in his native England, Winter says he wanted to get back in the game after a 14-year absence.

"I missed it," he says, before adding that he is uniquely qualified to buy houses for people.

"I have been going into people's houses since the age of 17. And I don't just go into one room I go around into every room. I have been through tens of thousands of houses. So, I've got a very interesting perspective. I challenge people to find someone who has been in as many homes."

"WE SORT OF CRAMMED IN PROBABLY FIVE YEARS' WORTH OF WORK CONNECTIONS IN A TWO-TO-THREE-MONTH PERIOD. WE SAW THAT MUCH OF EACH OTHER

Now that he is arguably Australia's best known buyers' advocate, that doesn't mean we will soon be seeing Winter joining the famous throng haggling for houses on The Block.

"I would never let any buyer of mine buy any Block house ever for those inflated prices," he laughs.

"I guarantee that! Now, if one of the buyers really wanted one – not that there seems to be many genuine buyers any more [on The Block] – I would wait a couple of years and then buy it for a knock-down price."

Not that Winter is completely opposed to Nine's juggernaut renovation series.

"I think the concept is great," he enthuses of The Block.

"I just wish they'd do some normal houses. I think this is why Australians have connected with Selling Houses. Sure we have done some multi-million-dollar homes over the years, some really beautiful homes with big price tags. We do one of those per season, well, not every season."

Instead, Winter says, Selling Houses Australia offers viewers a realistic approach to renovation and the property market, which, in these tough times, can be a greater salve than looking at the jaw-dropping makeovers of high-end homes, because they are attainable.

Once again this season, the team will renovate houses that are languishing on the market, in hopes of attracting buyers. Working to an often-tight budget, Moore and Scott showcase how something as simple as a fresh coat of paint or newly laid turf can breathe new life into a property.

"Contrary to what people believe, not everybody lives in a three-to-four-million-plus home and that [price tag] tends to be the sort of bare minimum for most of these [other real estate] shows," Winter says.

"Sometimes we just want inspiration for our home, not for luxury living."

Blast from the past: Gal Gadot ushers in a new era of Wonder Woman.

PICK OF THE WEEK

Saturday
WONDER WOMAN
Nine, 8.30pm, M (2017)

Directed by Patty Jenkins, who helmed the Oscar-winning Monster (2003), Wonder Woman is a compelling and stunningly shot exploration of the origins of the female superhero. Gal Gadot (Fast & Furious) commands the screen as the titular character, with a welcome emphasis on her strength and conviction, rather than her beauty. Set during World War I, Gadot is in her element as the fierce warrior trying to stop a global threat, while also discovering her true destiny. It's a fun, thoughtful, passionate and often disarmingly humorous blockbuster that features spectacular battle sequences and more than a nod to female empowerment. Chris Pine and Robin Wright also have starring roles. ★★★★

THE GREEN MILE
Seven, Friday, 8.30pm, MA15+ (1999)

Director Frank Darabont (The Shawshank Redemption) takes on another Stephen King story with this fulsome but laboured drama with a supernatural bent. It follows the relationships and various strange happenings between the guards and inmates of a death-row prison wing in Georgia in 1935. Events are told in flashback from the point of view of a retired prison guard (Tom Hanks), mostly concerning a towering Boo Radley-like convict (Michael Clarke Duncan, pictured). ★★★★

THE FATHER
SBS World Movies, Friday, 8.30pm, M (2020)

Veteran actor Anthony Hopkins puts on a masterclass in his Academy Award-winning role as Anthony, a Welsh octogenarian losing his grip on reality as he grapples with dementia. Olivia Colman (pictured, The Crown) is likewise remarkable as Anne, the daughter who is trying her best to provide care for Anthony despite his insistence he needs none. First-time director Florian Zeller, who co-wrote the screenplay, has crafted an incredibly affecting and profoundly moving portrayal. ★★★★

THE PERSONAL HISTORY OF DAVID COPPERFIELD
10 Shake, Saturday, 7.30pm, PG (2019)

Charles Dickens' tale of self-discovery is given a vibrant, postmodern retelling by director and writer Armando Iannucci (Veep). Starring Dev Patel (pictured), along with a star-studded cast including Hugh Laurie, Tilda Swinton and Peter Capaldi , it's a celebration of creativity, imagination and eccentricity that remains loyal to Dickens' autobiographical tome, with the tale split up into chapters as the man himself narrates his life, from child labourer to celebrated author. ★★★★

OCEAN'S ELEVEN
9Go!, Sunday, 7pm, PG (2001)

This quality crime caper sees George Clooney in the role of Danny Ocean, a suave thief who heads an 11-strong cadre of cons who conspire to swipe $160 million from three Las Vegas casinos . With Brad Pitt, Matt Damon, Don Cheadle and Julia Roberts (pictured with Clooney and Pitt) in on the game, Steven Soderbergh's fail-safe remake of the 1960 heist flick should be enjoyed for what it is: a showcase of cool actors in a vivid setting, under the guidance of a flattering director. ★★★★★

STAR TREK BEYOND
10 Shake, Monday, 8.30pm, M (2016)

The third Star Trek outing since the reboot sees Justin Lin replace J.J. Abrams in the director's chair. It also sees the crew of the USS Enterprise exploring the farthest depths of space, beyond where anyone has been before. It's the kind of place where, when something goes wrong it's up to you to get yourself out of trouble, as no one else is around to help. Chris Pine, Zachary Quinto (pictured) et al are back for another go around with Idris Elba as the villain of the piece. ★★★★

ACE VENTURA: PET DETECTIVE
9Go!, Tuesday, 7.30pm, M (1994)

"What the ... ?" was the reaction of the witnesses to Jim Carrey's (pictured) rambunctious, full-blooded, and timely introduction to the big screen; his pet detective character disturbing, puzzling and entertaining audiences as he snuffs out the conspirators involved in stealing the Miami Dolphins mascot – yes, an actual bottlenose. Carrey's Rubik's cube facial posturings and puerile gags offset a half-wit plotline with uneven results, but when it's funny, it's kind of ... really funny. ★★★★

PICK OF THE WEEK

Wild things: Dr Chris Brown and Julia Morris return to South Africa for I'm a Celebrity... Get Me Out of Here!

I'M A CELEBRITY... GET ME OUT OF HERE!
10, Sunday, 7.30pm

Another year, another band of familiar (and not-so-familiar) "celebrities" are deposited into the jungle campsite. If you've managed to steer clear of the rumour mill about who will end up in the wilderness, tonight's premiere will be a pleasant surprise. This year, the cast and crew have returned to the wilds of Africa, so expect tiger puns and elephant jokes galore from seasoned hosts Julia Morris and Dr Chris Brown. Last season's winner, radio star Dylan Lewis, donated his hefty $100,000 to charity Lifeline. Set to feature an outspoken radio host and a sporting legend, viewers can feel good that this palaver is all for a worthy cause.

UNDER THE VINES
ABC TV, Saturday, 8.20pm

Since the pandemic, daydreaming about uprooting to the country to eke out an idyllic life on a vineyard has become a mainstream folly. In this charming and frothy Kiwi drama, Rebecca Gibney (pictured, Packed to the Rafters) and Charles Edwards (Downton Abbey) play a mismatched pair of strangers who somehow inherited a winery in New Zealand together. Of course, it isn't all it's cracked up to be. As we near the end of this first season, Daisy and Louis are starting to warm to each other, with Gibney and Edwards exuding a palpable chemistry. Tonight, Daisy is over the moon about Griffin (Dean O'Gorman) visiting, but the mood is soured by Louis' wallowing following his marriage break-up.

MARRIED AT FIRST SIGHT
Nine, Monday, 7.30pm

If you've studiously tuned in for the past 10 seasons of unwavering drama, betrayal, ferocious flirting and bad behaviour, you know what you're in for with tonight's finale reunion special: more drama, with a sly little reveal or surprise. Tuning in for this emotional wreckage season in and season out is undoubtedly an entertaining guilty pleasure: just make sure you take a moment to wash away the indiscretions and tune back into real (unscripted) life afterwards. The tumultuous couples face experts John Aiken, Mel Schilling and clinical sexologist Alessandra Rampolla (pictured) one final time to reflect on what they have (and haven't) learnt.

WHO DO YOU THINK YOU ARE? US
SBS, Tuesday, 7.30pm

Some say that the less you know about an actor's personal life, the more believable they are in any given role; there's no risk of confusing the real with the fictitious. For this reason, many actors understandably prefer to keep their personal lives separate from their professional ones. Breaking Bad star Bryan Cranston (pictured) is one such actor who seems to manage to dodge the paparazzi and any unwanted attention. But, we all have our weaknesses and Cranston's is presumably the allure of genealogy and discovering nuggets from his family's past. Get to know the star's family story as he unearths an ancestor's heroic dedication during the Civil War.

FIGHTING FITNESS

WELLMANIA
Streaming, Netflix

Health kick: JJ Fong and Celeste Barber in Wellmania.

If the notion of daily cold-pressed green juices and spin classes make you feel ill, this tongue-in-cheek series may well be your (highly caffeinated) cup of tea. If you're already a yogi devotee, brace yourself for hilarious situations that will really shake your chakra.

Aussie comedian Celeste Barber has made a name for herself lampooning the over-the-top outfits and ridiculous poses of genetically blessed celebs on social media – now she's set for stardom with this fresh, funny new series.

Based on the bestselling book by journalist Brigid Delaney, Barber plays Liv, an Aussie, New York-based 30-something food writer. After she lands a dream gig as judge on an US cooking show, Liv's plans are in pieces when, after a quick visit to Sydney, immigration won't grant her a green card thanks to her "horrible cholesterol levels and insane blood pressure". In short: before she can return to New York, Liv needs to get healthy – and quick.

Created by Delaney and Benjamin Law (The Family Law), Wellmania pokes fun at our wellness culture and obsession with physical perfection as Liv tries anything and everything – including a colonoscopy and microdosing LSD – to whip herself back into shape.

Barber, who describes Liv as "so exciting and dynamic and full-on and wrong", steals the show. Also starring JJ Fong (Go Girls), Remy Hii (Neighbours) and Miranda Otto, it's a free-wheeling guilty pleasure about learning to live life to its best: just what the doctor ordered. – Rebecca Balloch

THE POWER
Streaming from Friday, Prime Video

Get set for girl power – with high-voltage electricity. This globe-trotting thriller is based on Naomi Alderman's book where the planet's teenage girls suddenly gain the ability to electrocute at will, flipping the dynamics of their male-dominated world. Featuring Toni Collette and Auli'i Cravalho (pictured, Moana), it's a dark tale that sparks intrigue.

THE BIG DOOR PRIZE
Streaming, Apple TV+

Irishman Chris O'Dowd's (pictured) heartfelt screen presence captivates in this delightful philosophical comedy. The story centres on Dusty (O'Dowd), a glass-half-full school teacher whose tight-knit small town is disrupted when a mysterious machine appears, offering tickets that reveals one's true life potential. With a dash of sci-fi, it's note-perfect.

THE CLEANER
Streaming, BritBox

A cleaner's gig was never so comical thanks to writer/star Greg Davies' (Taskmaster) turn as a crime scene caretaker. In season two, Wicky embraces a new look to please his girlfriend but, facing a job at a pub, will he stick to his no-booze promise? This six-episode run features stellar cameos, including Harriet Walter (pictured with Davies) and Roisin Conaty.

PERRY MASON
Streaming, Foxtel On Demand

This exquisitely shot crime drama has upped the ante in season two, with a haunting account of justice during the Great Depression. Starring the impeccable Matthew Rhys (pictured) as our hard-drinking protagonist, Mason is embroiled in a case involving the murder of a powerful oil family descendant. This season's stars include Hope Davis.

RABBIT HOLE
Streaming, Paramount+

Prepare for that feeling of deja vu while it lasts: Kiefer Sutherland (pictured) headlines this fast-paced new espionage thriller. The 24 alum mounts another action-packed role as a freelance spy caught in a dangerous corporate world of murder, but the plot soon veers with electrifying U-turns. Also stars Charles Dance (Game of Thrones) and Rob Yang (Succession).

Bromeliads are beauties

If there is one plant that has a love-hate relationship with gardener it would be the Bromeliad. Over the last few years many high profile landscapes have featured these plants for their colour displays. Yet it would be right to say that the Bromeliad would still be one of the most underutilised plants in landscapes.

Underneath old trees or palms that throw shade, there is usually a dense mat of roots that can make it hard to establish other plants. Bromeliads grow very well in these conditions as they don't feed from their roots. Bromeliads basically feed from the water debris that falls into their central cup.

Most Bromeliads grow well on tree trunks and in tree branches. Lava rock or scoria is recommended as a potting medium. If you plant Bromeliads directly into your garden it is best to build up the soil with rocks, gravel or scoria to ensure good drainage. Bromeliads are particularly good for shade areas that are fairly dry from root competition.

Bromeliads need good light to maintain their beautiful colours. There are several varieties that will survive in all-day sun but most need protection from midday sun. Bromeliads are hardy plants native to South America that enjoy the humidity of the tropics.

Bromeliads will produce coloured leaves around flowering time which attracts the insects or birds required for pollination. Bromeliads will flower only once in its lifetime and then produce off shoots, usually from the base and finally die. The cup of the bromeliad should be kept full of clean water and the cup flushed out completely once every month.

Most Bromeliads use their roots for stability and feed through trichomes on their leaves. Their main requirement is to drain well but they can survive being too wet.

Bromeliads mainly need phosphorous and potassium and have a low requirement for added nitrogen as it will only make the leaves long and green. An orchid flowering fertiliser or a bloom booster is the closest to the plants required NPK ratio.

Remember to flush out the water regularly that sits in the central cup, otherwise mosquitoes can breed in these Bromeliads.

Alcantarea has become a very popular landscape plant, this due to the size of this Bromeliad. Some Alcantarea can reach sizes of 1.5m across with flower spikes 2.5m high. A native to high cool environment along rocky cliffs in Brazil but if acclimatised Alcantarea can tolerate a warm sunny positions.

Aechmea blanchetiana or Blanchet's Aechmea is a spectacular plant with pale green to bright orange arching leaves depending on the amount of sun it receives. The more sun the brighter orange the leaves but the hot afternoon sun in Summer can see the leaves burn. The flower spike has a terminal multi-branched inflorescence of small flowers surrounded by red and yellow bracts during spring. Blanchet's Aechmea is a large plant growing to over 1m in height and 2m across.

Neoregelia on display at a flower show.

Billbergia are usually tall and tubular, the foliage can be mottled, cross banded or variegated. The inflorescence rises from the centre then cascades down the plant as the flowers open - they are short lived but the colours are exquisite. Do not fertilise billbergia or they will lose their colour until the next generation.

Guzmania are soft-leafed, with exquisite inflorescence, the complete flower head of the Guzmania including stems, stalks, bracts, and flowers, rising from the centre in yellow, orange or red with white or red flower petals. They need to be kept under shade.

Neoregelia or Neos have been come very popular with gardeners for their showy foliage with bright colours and interesting patterns, and they are among the most widely hybridized types of bromeliads. Small flowers appear inconspicuously inside of the leaf cup when the plants bloom. These bromeliads are sometimes called "painted fingernail" for the pink markings on their leaves.

Tillandsias or Air Plants can appear quite alien and can vary in size and shape. Most are saucer-sized but some can grow up to 3 metres. Normally a grey-green plant Tillandsias may change colour when coming into flower. Tillandsias need regular watering and good air movement to survive. Tillandsias are mainly tree dwellers and can be attached to almost anything.

I think most gardeners would be surprised by beauty of some of these plants.

Innovation on show

The latest varietal performance data and agronomy insights for dual-purpose peanuts, sesame and mungbeans will be available to Central Queensland farmers at a field day planned for Emerald on Wednesday, 19 April.

The activity will be held at 'Deneliza Downs' and will also feature an educational program delivered by CQUniversity for local high-school agriculture students, as well as farm machinery technologies from RDO Equipment Australia.

The field day will be hosted by the Northern Australia Crop Research Centre of Excellence, a partnership that brings together researchers from CQUniversity with farm machinery leaders RDO Equipment Australia, farmers from the Central Highlands Cotton Growers and Irrigators Association and Grain Producers Australia, and agribusiness expertise from the Central Highlands Development Corporation.

The Centre was formed in 2020 and has already delivered several large-scale research projects across the north aiming to increase farming profitability through higher value varieties, new crop types, improved agronomy and incorporating broadacre crop production into traditional livestock operations.

These include:

Mungbean varietal development from AgriVentis Technologies with support from CQUniversity, including the latest on the Green Dragon and Green Taipan varieties launched last year.

Great Northern Spices – a research project funded by the Cooperative Research Centre for Developing Northern Australia (CRCNA) and led by CQUniversity in partnership with AgriVentis Technologies, to develop the enabling agronomy required to support the expansion of the high-value crops black sesame, kalonji and fennel production. Project partners include Queensland's Department of Agriculture and Fisheries, the Northern Territory Department of Industry Tourism and Trade, Department of Primary Industries and Regional Development (DPIRD WA), TRAP Services Tully, the Burdekin Bowen Floodplain Management Advisory Committee, Rockhampton Regional Council, RDO Equipment, CH Cotton Growers and Irrigators Association, Allenden Seeds, Agridry Australia, the University of Queensland and the University of Southern Queensland.

Richard Weston of RDO shows John Deere spray rig to Blackwater SHS ag students.

The Grain and Graze North: Dual-Purpose Peanuts project has shown that peanuts can provide up to one tonne per hectare of biomass for cattle fodder without significantly compromising end-of-season nut yields. Funded by the CRCNA, research activities are being conducted by CQUniversity and the Bega Group in partnership with farmers, QDAF, the Northern Territory Department of Industry Tourism and Trade, TRAP Services Tully, the Burdekin Bowen Floodplain Management Advisory Committee, Rockhampton Regional Council, the Central Highlands Cotton Growers and Irrigators Association, RDO Equipment, and AgForce Queensland.

The day will start with a workshop for high-school agriculture students from 10am to 12noon – teachers must register their interest by contacting Saba Sinai at s.sinai@cqu.edu.au or 0432 712 378.

Farmers, agronomists and industry participants are invited to attend from 3pm to 5pm for a series of researcher presentations, and a field walk to inspect new varietal lines and crop performance, followed by an informal barbecue and drinks.

The field day will also be followed by a barbecue.

Deneliza Downs' is located 5km east of Emerald on the Capricorn Highway.

RSVP for the schools workshop is essential – contact Saba Sinai at s.sinai@cqu.edu.au or 0432 712 378.

Herbicide synergism for weed control

PAUL'S PADDOCK

PAUL MCINTOSH

For many decades , several agronomists have a long held belief that mixing some herbicides gives you synergism.

In other words the two products increase the activity of their various mode of action against certain weeds.

Myself included in this group of synergy believers, especially with a Group 5,6 (formerly Group C) of which Atrazine belongs to and the old broadleaf herbicide of 24-D from the Group 4 (was Group I) .

After walking round hundreds and hundreds of broadleaf weed infested paddocks over the decades , you certainly get a large dose of visual results from various weed control herbicide mixtures.

One of these more favoured mixes was Atrazine and 24-D plus some wetting agent. This in-crop mixture was originally used in the 1970s and has certainly cleaned up a lot of broadleaf weeds in our paddocks of grain sorghum , maize and some millet species.

It even has had a suppression effect on small grasses at times from my paddock inspections.

My Australian Herbicide Resistance Initiative or AHRI colleagues in Perth have been busy investigating this synergism effect between herbicides.

What they found with Metribuzin (5,6) with a 24-hour pre-treatment of 24-D (4) was a significant difference in the translocated proportion of the Metribuzin to the below ground part of the weed. In this case it was wild oats or Avena Sterilis.

Broadleaf weeds infesting a maize crop on the Darling Downs.

Is it too much of a leap to suggest that synergism mechanism may well have been happening in the Northern region of summer cropping areas for our vast broadleaf selection?

We get enough antagonism between 24-D and other herbicides like Glyphosate, so it is nice to get one back where one of the key Weedsmart Big 6 tactics is to mix and rotate herbicides and having done so achieve a better weed control result.

Cleaner and greener

By Agforce Ceo Michael Guerin

The life of a farmer is often a thankless one.

The hours are long, the work is hard, and sometimes the rewards are few and far between.

Add to that ongoing criticism from anti-agriculture groups and the constant need to fend off attacks from people who don't fully understand the industry, and you've got yourself a tough existence.

So, when something comes along to make things a little easier, we need to embrace it.

The State Government has now released its plan to achieve cleaner and greener food and fibre production in Queensland, charting a path to lower emissions from the agriculture industry over the next decade.

The Low Emissions Agriculture Roadmap 2022-2032 outlines a process aimed to achieve a sustainable future across five key pathways; reducing emissions from livestock, cropping and horticulture, using more renewable energy on farm, carbon farming and land management, and improving supply chains.

Designed to help Queensland agribusinesses thrive, it supports producers to achieve environmental outcomes, while enabling them to continue doing what they do best - produce the world's best food, fibre and foliage.

Of course, our producers have already made great leaps in climate action.

Agriculture is the only industry to have tangibly reduced its emissions profile in the past 20 years, and the steps we have taken to improve our practices and care for the environment are already good news stories worthy of far greater publicity than has been afforded.

As an industry we lead the world in innovation and have a proud history of being able to lift productivity and output in an ever-changing environment to support the sustainability of our businesses and the sector as a whole.

But we must not rest on our laurels.

Through this roadmap, new technologies and best practice management will ensure ongoing progress across landscapes and supply chains, while cementing Queensland agriculture as a sustainable and globally competitive industry.

Consumers increasingly want reassurance that the food and fibre they buy has been grown in an ethical and sustainable way that supports the long-term viability of our unique landscape.

The time has come to stand up and be counted.

AgForce CEO Michael Guerin.

Bouncing into first place

A trampolinist from Emerald Gymnastics bounced his way to the top at the Trampoline State Championships 2023, becoming the male State Champion on trampoline.

Charlie Brandt made the finals for both trampoline and double mini tramp (DMT) and also finished in fifth on DMT.

Emerald Gymnastics' Sue Fehlhaber said it was the first time Charlie attended the high-calibre event, which was hosted by Gymnastics Queensland and held at Logan Metro Sports and Events Centre in Brisbane at the weekend.

"Charlie exceeded his expectations and couldn't be prouder of his performances," she said.

One other trampolinist from the club, Lillian Botma, attended the championships.

It was also Lillian's first time at the championships, with Sue describing the level four female section competition she faced as extremely tough.

Sue said she did the club proud, finishing 21st on trampoline and 23rd on DMT.

"Lillian was proud of how she competed and is keen to get back to the gym to continue to train and improve for future events," she said.

"Charlie and Lillian performed extremely well with very pleasing results."

The pair was supported by a very proud coach in Leesa Lawrence.

Leesa said words could not fully express how proud she is of Charlie and Lillian and she could not wait to see what they can achieve in the future.

Emerald Gymnastics' trampolinist Charlie Brandt, coach Leesa Lawrence and trampolinist Lillian Botma made the club proud at the recent Trampoline State Championships.

Training for state series

By Katherine Butler

Eleven riders from the Central Highlands BMX Club tested their limits at Walkerston in Mackay as they prepare for next weekend's state series.

There are about 500 entries for the state series at Harbour City BMX, Gladstone, including 20 from Central Highlands BMX Club.

From as young as four years old to as old as 16, the local riders will showcase their talent on their BMX bikes and push themselves to the max.

In Mackay recently, several riders already proved their mettle.

Maggie McDougall was outstanding, finishing first in the 11 year old girls' race before coming fourth in the eight to 10 year old cruiser.

Lincoln Mabin finished first in the eight year old boys' category, while Jake Gray came in second in the eight year old boys' in the same division.

Lottie McDougall did well, coming second in the eight year old girls' race.

Darcy Winch also performed well bringing home third in the nine year old boys' race and second in eight to 10 year old cruiser.

Braxton Gray home home fourth overall in the 10 year old boys' race.

Henry Winch came second in the 11 year old boys', while Zane Harris came in fourth.

Ben Harris came in fifth in the 13 year old boys'.

Memphis Mabin participated in five sprocket girls, which are non-competitive races.

Murphie Mabin also did well in her participation in six sprocket girls.

Central Highlands BMX Club spokesperson Hayley Mabin said the kids loved competing and training.

"It's so much fun socially. They learn a lot of physical skills and they make lifelong friendships," she said.

"It gets them out of their comfort zone and they learn from that and they grow as human beings."

Mabin said everyone has different training, depending on how determined they are.

"Anyone can go to the track two to five times a week," she said.

"Some people go to the gym as well.

"It depends on how serious they take the sport."

Bears return to hunt

By Liam Emerton

Central Highlands Rugby League will welcome back their 2022 premiers this week for the Emerald Industrial Supplies Men's A Grade competition.

After a stellar round one with top results, the Clermont Bears will be eager to test out one of the opening match-day winners.

The Bears will play host to the Springsure Mountain Men who got their season underway with a 30-22 victory over the Emerald Brothers last Saturday night.

Kobe Roser was one of the standout players, scoring once and kicking a perfect five conversions.

Five-eighth Todd Daniels and prop Rohan Staal also found their way onto the scoresheet in a brilliant all-round performance from the Mountain Men.

The only thing the team will need to sure up is their defence which leaked 22 points from Brothers' Joseph Howard, Connor Maclennan, Jacob Weatherley and James Ross.

The game will also play an important role in the mentality of Springsure with the side being eliminated from last year's competition via a 52-6 mauling at the hands of the Bears.

The Mountain Men will aim to conquer their demons against the 2022 champions but Clermont will be keen to kick start their season with another monster victory.

The Bears' 2022 grand final opponents, the Dysart Bulls, opened their campaign with a strong win over the Emerald Tigers.

Centre Bree'an Munns' double was the highlight of the team's performance as they cruised to a 30-16 victory.

The club will be hunting down the second Emerald team in the competition this weekend when they shape up against the Emerald Brothers.

The Fish took that aforementioned 30-22 loss to the Mountain Men and will be hoping they can find a way to bounce back.

In the Sunday afternoon sunlights the Blackwater Crushers will face off against the Middlemount Panthers with both looking to improve from their round one performances.

The Panthers suffered the closest loss of the round, going down 26-24 to the Bluff Rabbitohs, while the Crushers were admirable in a tough defeat to the emotionally-fueled Peak Downs Pirates 34-20.

The Crushers will have to be on the look out for five-eighth Michael Baker who crossed for a hattrick in their losing effort.

And in the opening match of the round the previously mentioned Rabbitohs will face off against the Emerald Tigers at Alan McIndoe Park.

Bluff's attack is looking sharp with five individual try scorers, Daniel Parker, Seann Spreadborough, Preston Byrne, James Livock and Julius Malone-Mcinnerney, in that close win over the Panthers.

That will concern the Tigers who will have to see their defence strengthen drastically from round one.

The Pirates, who were incredible in the opening round, will sit out the second after drawing the round two bye.

Good start for Bunnies

By Scott Power

The Bluff Rabbitohs took on the Middlemount Panthers at Maccas Oval in Bluff on Saturday night and after being in control for most of the match they managed to hold on for a deserved 26-24 win, much to the delight of the vocal home crowd.

Middlemount opened the scoring in the opening stanza after the Rabbitohs were pressing the Panthers line for back-to-back sets.

Not long after, the large supporter base at home was cheering with the Rabbitohs going over as Dan Parker charged in to score and with more points in them, Bluff were able to go in at halftime break with confidence despite Middlemount holding a two-point advantage at 12-10.

After the break, Maccas Oval came alive as the Rabbitohs opened the scoring and got out tot a nice lead.

The Middlemount Panthers were not to be denied and were capitalising on mistakes.

They were able to claw back the lead, but with the siren sounding after the final try, the Rabbitohs got the two points to take the win over a determined Panthers.

Rabbitohs coach Ethan McLaughlin was pleased with his side's effort as it was the first time some of the players had played together.

As the year goes on there will be continual improvement and he hopes his youthful side will stay positive.

Players Player Seann Spreadborough was instrumental with a solid performance.

Man of The Match Brodie Smith created havoc through middle and he was supported by Joe Lollo who made a welcome return to the Red and Green.

Akeem Williams Coveney gave his side great direction and was strong at the back .

Overall it was a solid effort.

Players who stood out for Middlemount were three-try hero Michael Baker and workhorse forward Harrison Cavanagh.

The Rabbitohs travel to Emerald Friday night, 31 March, and this should be a great match up.

Bluff Rabbitohs are off to a solid start for the year with the win over Middlemount Panthers.

Treasure Park delivers rich bounty for McCann

The Moranbah community and surrounding districts packed Treasure Park meeting absolutely to the rafters on Saturday, 25 March, and what a day of country racing action was witnessed at the town.

It was one of the biggest crowds in attendance for the annual March meeting in a extremely impressive community effort, club secretary Bianca Bulst said.

Barcaldine based trainer Bevan Johnson got on the front foot early, saddling up the winner of the 1400 metre Class B Handicap with Sizzling River ($4) giving apprentice Savannah McCann a big thrill, scoring the first win of her career.

It was a extremely popular win oncourse when Bevan Johnson's runner Nouverre Fille ($3.50) took out the 1000 metre $17,500 QTIS Maiden Handicap ridden by Ian French scoring in the shadows of the post and handing the oncourse bookies a nasty result.

The Johnson-trained mare is raced by Treasure Park race caller Tony McMahon.

Mackay-based trainer Joshua Manzelmann had luck on his side at Moranbah when his Wren Plucked ($2.10) who was ridden by apprentice Erin Molloy to take out the 1170 metre Benchmark 60 Handicap in a very impressive effort giving Molloy the second win of her short career.

The main event of the day, the 1170 metre $10,000 Open Handicap provided one of the most thrilling finishes of the day when Mackay trainer John Manzelmann led in a quinella, saddling up the winner Splasher ($2.60), who skipped to the lead and held off stablemate Mr Larabee ($2.80) in a thriller of a finish.

Splasher was ridden by apprentice Savannah McCann.

The jockey honours were all with MCann who rode a three winners at the meeting at only her second day at the races.

Training honours went to Bevan Johnson with a double capping of a great day of racing in Moranbah

In the Central West the Longreach Jockey Club had its first meeting for 2023 with a five-race program.

One of the big highlights oncourse was the win of Parkburn ($3) in the QTIS Class 3 Plate over 1000 metres after being well found in the betting scored for Mark Oates and apprentice Anna Bakos, who recently outrode her country claim.

The other big win was from Smooth Move ridden by Rob Faehr in the Open Plate over 1200 metres.

The win suggests the David Rewald-trained galloper will continue on its merry winning way in the west and will be one of the benchmarks this season in the Open grades.

The riding and training honours at Longreach were with Tim Brummell and Henry Foster who combined for a double

Clermont Bulls take title

By Liam Emerton

Clermont Bulls are champions this year, wrapping up the grand final with a breathtaking win.

The Barton Shield grand final was held at the Rolleston Oval with the Bulls winning by five wickets.

Rolleston Roosters won the toss, with Darcy Hagan and Marshall Sullivan opening the batting.

Rolleston's Sullivan was dismissed after making seven runs, after a 29 run partnership.

Finn Smith walked to the middle and joined Hagan to make 35 runs together.

Smith was banished a solid 22 runs, taking the total up to 64 before he was caught in the deep from the bowling of Adam Williams.

Hagen's impressive run in the middle would continue seeing partners in Boyd Schwarz (16) and Rohan Macdonald (14) before eventually eventually being knocked over.

Hagen would get the Roosters all the way to 108 runs, putting on 38 from 82 balls faced across an incredible 105 minute spell.

Brenden Finger would come up with the crucial wicket for the Bulls who would finally take down the team-high-scoring opener.

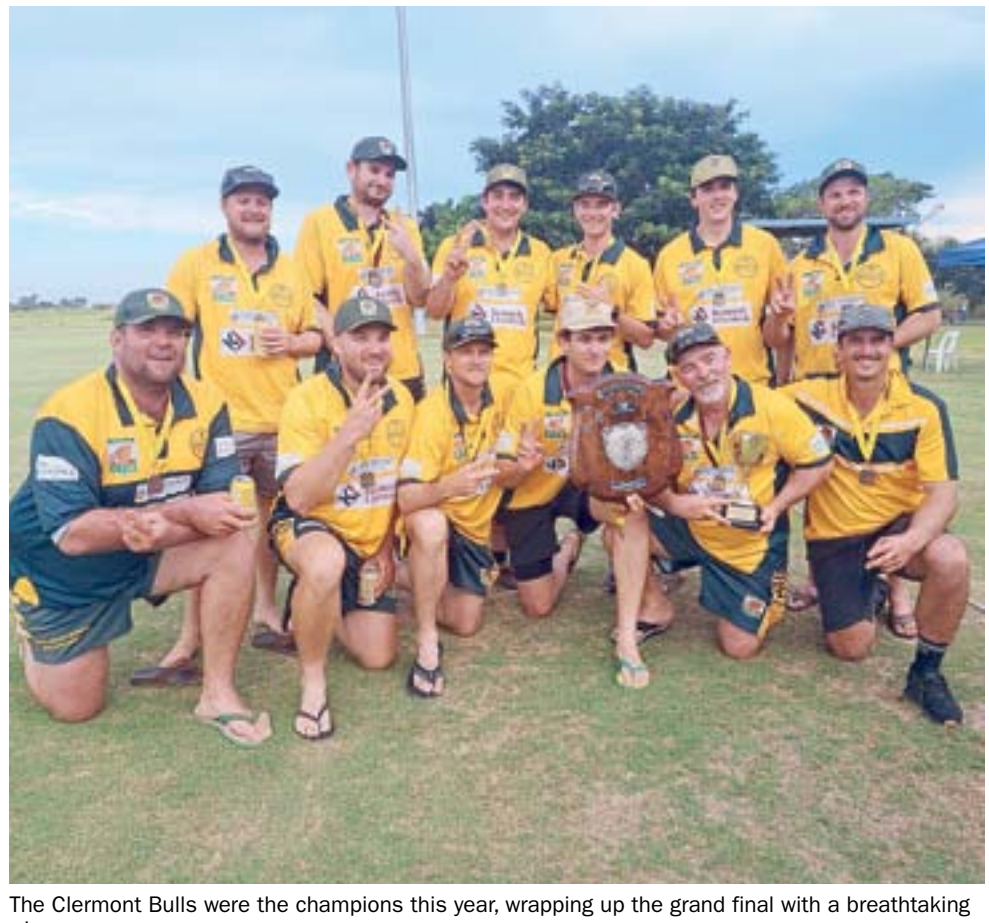

But that wicket would bring forward the Roosters' most dangerous batsman when Lehman Brunjes took to the middle.

Brunjes would finish with an unbeaten 30 runs from 27 balls in a monster display, taking the home side up to 181 runs before they ran out of overs.

Matthew Hicks and Ryan Nunan would begin the run chase, attempting to take down a very solid score.

Hicks and Nunan would put together a 51 run partnership before Hicks would eventually be dismissed for 20 runs.

Nick Smith would make his way to the crease, partnering Nunan for 27 runs before the latter would be caught from the bowling of Hagan.

The Clermont Bulls were the champions this year, wrapping up the grand final with a breathtaking win.

Nunan finished on a game-high score of 41 runs from just 27 runs in a stint which included six boundaries.

It was the next two partnerships that truly set up the Bulls for success however.

Rhys Williams would team up with Smith, who was eventually stumped on 41 runs from 36 balls, and Tom Robertson (20 from 15).

Those two partnerships would bring the Bulls to 134 and 173 runs respectively, all but sealing the game for the away team.

Rhys Williams would remain in the middle finishing with a match-winning 40 runs from just 49 balls.

After being the best Rooster with the bat, Hagan would do all he could with the cherry, taking three wickets, but it wasn't enough as the Bulls charged home for a five-wicket win.

Rolleston State School students did their best to encourage their team.

Hurling into history books

By Emma McBryde

Success was but a stone's throw away for three throwers from the Emerald Athletic Club who attended the Australian Masters Athletics National Championship in Sydney earlier this month.

Niroshan Tharanga Dias Subaweerage, known in the club as Dias or D, received a bronze medal in javelin and placed fifth in shot put.

His third place javelin throw was a whopping 40.9m, up on his 38.98m throw which also placed him third last year.

Meanwhile, Faye Morgan took out the bronze medal in women's weight throw and placed sixth in hammer and tenth in shot put.

The third member to hurl their way into the championship's history books was Suminda Galketiya, known to club members as Sumi, who placed seventh in javelin and eighth in shot put.

The event was held at the renowned Sydney Olympic Park Athletics Centre and Warm up Track at Homebush and hosted by the NSW Masters Association between March 10.

Dias said it was a big event.

Club president Wayne Gakowski praised the club's athletes and their performance at the event.

"It's great when you have some athletes, especially masters," he said.

"We used to be little athletics years ago, about 14 or 15 years ago, then stopped at 14 (years old)… so any of the parents that came down couldn't compete.

"But now we're with Athletics North Queensland and it's from four years old… to 100."

Dias said although he had participated in throwing events such as javelin and shot put since he was young in Sri Lanka, his favourite event was actually high jump.

However, he said a knee injury in 2007 forced him to sideline high jump and turn his focus to studying athletics coaching.

Dias was just recently awarded the Central Highlands Regional Council 2023 Sport and Active Recreation Awards master sportsperson of the year.

He hopes to go to the World Masters Athletics Championships event next year.

Emerald Athletics Club was well-represented at the Australian Masters Athletics Championships in Sydney this month.

Oh what a grand end to season!

By Tony Harrold

As minor premiers the Magpies hosted the grand final against Brothers on Saturday, 25 March.

The game had it all - a dropped catch and subsequent runout, bowlers going down and unable to complete their overs, two excellent batting performances, good banter between the teams, good bowling performances, pressure, pressure and more pressure and then to top all this off the match ended in a tie.

Brothers won the toss and elected to bowl.

Levi Harrold and Jackson Bailie opened the batting innings and made a great start with a 98-run stand.

Unfortunately, a flow of wickets then had the Magpies 4 down for 102 before a few more little partnerships took the score to all out for 151.

Lachan Geddes (25) and Hunter Sale (12) made good contributions, with Levi remaining not out 78 off 48 balls.

The main wicket taker for Brothers was Jack Hudson with 4 for 3 off 4.5 overs.

Defending 151 required good tight bowling and the openers Jackson and Hunter delivered with Hunter getting the first breakthrough and finishing with 3 overs, 1 for 4.

While a steady flow of wickets was maintained, Calum Ryan presented as the one whose wicket the Magpies desperately needed to take.

He retired and then returned late in the game and Jackson off a slower ball (caught by Ethan) finally got his wicket when the game seemed all but gone.

With Calum dismissed for a well-made 64 (60 balls) the equation was simple, Magpies needed 1 wicket and Brothers 4 runs.

With scores level the ball was struck towards mid on, the batters set off for the single, but a diving save by Levi cut off the ball, a gentle underarm to the bowler Laim Sampson completed the run out.

Brothers were all out 151, scores level a Grand Final tie!

The Stage 2 grand final was taken out by the Capella Cricket Club with a win over minor premiers Emerald Brothers Blue.

The Magpies fought out a thrilling tie with Brothers in the Stage 3 grand final.

Capella were the Stage 2 victors.
