PARKING FOR ALL

KAITLYN GIBBONS

PORT PIRIE - The Port Pirie Regional Council has discussed a review for accessible parking in the Port Pirie central business district (CBD).

At the March 27 council meeting, Councillors Alan Zubrinich and Grant Petagna moved the council to review the availability of accessible car parking spaces in the CBD with consideration to universal design principles in its Disability Access and Inclusion Plan.

Port Pirie Regional Council Mayor Leon Stephens says the council was reviewing the availability of accessible parking as an action in its Disability Access Inclusion Plan.

Mayor Stephens said the review was in response to suggestions for improvement made by members of the community and to ensure the disabled parking spaces provided were current to legislative requirements.

"The changes will benefit anyone who is legally permitted to use a disabled parking space," he said.

"The changes are part of the recognition of the needs of people living with disability in our community.

"If we don't include the people that are disabled it is a mish-mash.

"So we had this great meeting where we had 30-odd people there who gave some really good advice.

"And one of the things that came up quite evident was parking, now with us [the council] going forward we were just about to embark on a parking review in the town.

"So whilst we're there we formulated this motion to read that we need to do an audit on our disabled parks, increase the number of disabled car parks but also make them wider so when you're in a wheelchair you can get out of your car and get onto the footpath."

Mayor Stephens said he was proud of where Port Pirie Council elected members went with their final decision.

"I think it was just an amazing outcome and we learn all the time," he said.

"Some of our cities are a couple of hundred years old and they were built with old architecture and at Port Pirie Regional Council we nominated to spend $2 million on our buildings alone just to make paths and doorways wider to make our buildings disability inclusive.

"A recent thing we're doing on the beach, we were going to put in a playground and we thought we needed to put a swing in for disabled kids."

The council decided to inform the proposed new Inclusion Reference Group of its intention to update the existing disability parking locations in the CBD, and then seek its advice on other potential future parking locations.

Community recognition

KAITLYN GIBBONS

PORT PIRIE - Port Pirie Regional councillors have voted for an amendment to be made to its Acknowledgement of Country.

At the council meeting on March 27, councillors Michael Hopgood and Leeanne Peters moved that the council amend the relevant council agendas and terms of reference include other acknowledgements.

Cr Hopgood said it is obvious to him that Port Pirie was a unique community which served everyone in every facet of life.

"I would like to make a suggestion that we [pay] tribute to them in the opening statement of our council agenda," Cr Hopgood said.

"I would like to put to the chamber for consideration that it would be appropriate that we place after the Acknowledgment of Country the following sentence 'we pay tribute to those men and women who have served and continue to serve this great country, we also pay tribute to our first responders, we also recognise the multicultural community that makes this place so unique'."

Cr Hopgood said he also wanted the sentence to be included at the start of every council meeting.

"It [should also] be included when speaking publicly by the spokesperson of council," he said.

Port Pirie Regional Council Mayor Leon Stephens said the council had decided to go forward with the motion, which meant the sentence would be added onto the original acknowledgement.

"The reason for the change is to recognise the wide range of people that are in our community," Mayor Stephens said.

"In addition to the traditional custodians whose lands we meet upon, we also acknowledge those men and women who have served and continue to serve this great country, we also pay tribute to our first responders, we also recognise the multicultural community that makes this place so unique.

"We are not getting rid of the acknowledgment, we are enhancing it.

"We are enhancing the welcome to all of our community, the multicultural stuff is something we have also been consulting with our communities on a lot of the groups that are around.

Mayor Stephens said Port Pirie has a vast multicultural community that has a rich heritage in the region.

"We've got Greek churches that are doing 150 years celebrations, we've got 95 years of Blessing of The Fleet with the Italian community and we don't mention anything about it," he said.

"It's stupid, they strengthen our community, we've got Filipinos that are beautiful church-going people that volunteer left, right and centre [and] we don't acknowledge them.

"The word acknowledgement for the Aboriginal community is completely different, it's a matter of respect for our Nukunu people."

"[The acknowledgement] will be said at the opening of council meetings, when I speak publicly, just to let people know we are inclusive."

The motion was carried unanimously and the changes will be made effective immediately.

Coastcare education a must for environment

LACHLAN SMITH

PORT AUGUSTA - Port Augusta Coastcare held an Education Day at the Barracks on the weekend as a way to educate the community around what residents could do to improve the environment and help with the different environmental projects that were being carried out within the region.

Port Augusta Coastcare chairperson Jodie Harris said about 330 people attended the event on Saturday, April 6.

Ms Harris said the event was a good opportunity to enlighten people, as most wanted to do the right thing by the environment and the education day was a way to give them tips and steer them in the right direction.

"It is great that in one location they can get all of this information and learn about the environment and sustainability," she said.

"There were people from Roxby, Quorn and Whyalla so it was a good event for the region as well."

Ms Harris said there was a great selection of stalls and guest speakers where they could learn more about caring for the environment.

The guest speaker had an opportunity to present their work in the gallery at the Barracks.

"Every speaker had a full crowd to speak to which was wonderful," Ms Harris said.

Guest speakers outlined some of the projects that were happening around the region, and the nation.

The audience heard updates from Stefan Andrews around the Great Southern Reef and the work he and his team were carrying out.

He outlined the documentaries he had filmed and the information he had gathered.

Dr Shelly Paull, who is based on the Eyre Peninsula, made the trip to Port Augusta to speak about the cuttlefish species.

Dr Shelly Paull was able to speak to people at the Port Augusta Coastcare Education Day about cuttlefish species on the weekend.

"Jeff Bowey showed all his underwater photography which is always really popular," Ms Harris said.

Representatives from KESAB explained to people the importance of recycling.

She said several families had attended the event this year, with children being able to have their face painted as well as attend a live performance from Sea Star Rock, originally from the Flinders Ranges.

"That was really well received by the children," Ms Harris said.

Ms Harris said the event worked to get children engaged, as it gave them the opportunity to see creatures from the ocean up close that they might not have ever seen before.

She said a family from Quorn used the education day to hold their child's birthday.

There were several hands-on displays that were run by the Marine Discovery Centre, KESAB and the Caritas Cubs had different children's activities on offer.

"The council gave us all a heap of the green waste household bins," Ms Harris said.

"We are able to give them away to people to explain how to recycle their green water into their green composting bins."

"Fishcare was there explaining to people about different species, sizes and the regulations around fishing," Ms Harris said.

The Lions and Rotary clubs and the Quorn Coffee Corral Van were onsite serving food and drinks as well.

"Mayor Linley Shine opened the event and gave an Acknowledgement of Country and welcomed everyone which was lovely," she said.

Ms Harris said Port Augusta Coastcare was looking to run more regular 'Science in the Pub' events so people who missed the education day would be able to attend.

Ms Harris encouraged people to the group's Facebook page if they would like to learn more about the speakers and their projects.

Passion, care for Port Pirie

SAM LOWE

PORT PIRIE - Former Port Pirie resident and medical practitioner David Squirrell has been recognised for his ongoing dedication to academic medicine and serving his community with an Order of Australia Medal (OAM).

Born to a poor family in London, Mr Squirrell at a young age took a trip across the globe to be fostered by an Australian family in the 1960s.

It was shortly after, at age 13, that he came to the realisation that medicine was his calling, and he would do whatever it took to serve his community.

After growing up in Adelaide, Mr Squirrell served as a psychiatrist until 1980 which was when he decided to switch up his career and in May, 1982, he started his work supporting the Port Pirie community.

Mr Squirrell started procedural practice for obstetrics, anaesthetics, surgery, paediatrics, and pretty much everything in between.

He said that he saw the need for medical support in regional communities, but during his time in Port Pirie, the community became something more than the place he lived and worked.

"After I'd gained all the medical skills, I decided 'let's look at going to a rural community, practise those skills to become good enough to practice those skills," he said.

"Hence, I went to Port Pirie, and I loved it so much, the community spirit, the fact that I could be an integral part and help bring about change that I didn't stay for the planned two years, I stayed for 12 years.

"During that time I was very much a community person, I was involved with music club, organ club, entertainment, setting up the triathlon for two years, and also running in two Federal and State elections because I got so annoyed with governments not funding, not standing up for rural health.

"It just snowballed really … I just think that it was a very, very rewarding time."

Over the years, Mr Squirrell has been involved in many organisations and community groups, including being the president of Blind Citizens Australia SA from 2012 to 2022; the national board vice president for DeafBlind Australia; and a disability representative on the Electoral Disability Advisory Committee.

He has also been a Paul Harris Fellow and Member of the Paul Harris Society (Rotary); 2019 Blind Australian of the Year Award finalist; and 2021 Australian of the year award finalist.

Mr Squirrell said that he loved being able to give back to the community but only did it to see the community flourish, and not for personal gain.

"I believe that every person has the responsibility to try to add value to our society and make it a better place and leave a legacy that is positive for the next generation," he said.

"Part of that is fighting what I believe to be injustice, and quite often, using the 'D' word, discriminatory.

"I believe there is a lot of bureaucracy we have to overcome which is incumbent both in corporate and in government circles.

"I believe that if we make our society safe for the most vulnerable within our society, then everyone else benefits."

While he was pleased with the award, Mr Squirrell said receiving an OAM was rather humbling.

"I don't tend to live every day thinking 'what's in it for me', that doesn't drive me," he said.

"But when that letter does come you kind of think, wow, there's an audience out there that actually has done some homework and put two and two together and said 'let's recognise this chap for what he's done'.

"I'm happy to receive it, it's not going to change me as a person, I'm still going to be the same guy that I hope everyone in Port Pirie remembers me being."

Joining Mr Squirrell to be awarded an OAM on Thursday, April 11, will be former Port Pirie Mayor and dedicated Recorder contributor Brenton Vanstone.

Outages for Pt Broughton Telstra customers

PORT Broughton is about to experience a series of temporary mobile outages in order for an improved 4G service to be delivered to the community.

Telstra began upgrading its mobile base station in Port Broughton on Thursday April 4, for the day, and is scheduled to resume again from April 14 to 22.

There will be temporary outages or a reduction in mobile coverage for Telstra customers, however Triple Zero calls will still work from any phone.

Landline services, NBN internet and mobile customers with a different provider will not be affected by the downtime.

Telstra Regional general manager Michael Patterson said the work needed to be done during daylight hours due to safety.

"Where possible we will just be switching off the parts of the tower we are working on, leaving the rest operational," Mr Patterson said.

"While coverage and capacity will decline during this time, we want to keep the amount of time the site is off air to an absolute minimum.

"There's never a good time to undertake this sort of work but once it is completed, it will mean better mobile services for local residents."

Mr Patterson said as a company Telstra invested in continuously improving regional connectivity, and over the past seven years it has invested $4 billion in the regional mobile network.

For people who do require their service during the timeframe, Telstra recommends activating wi-fi-calling on their phones, if they are able to connect to a wi-fi service.

This is a free setting which can be turned on in the phone settings, if it is not already switched on.

As for EFTPOS terminals, many of the machine can also be connected to a fixed line of wi-fi connection, but retailers should contact their bank for more details.

Stella Newland is a second year social work student in Whyalla who is already scared about how her third year placement is going to affect her financially. 399495

Social work strains

RACHEL HAGAN

THE Australia Services Unions says one in five students studying social work are dropping out of their degrees due to the six months of unpaid work they are forced to complete.

The cost of living pressures are building for everyone, but during this financially difficult time social work students are being asked to work 1000 hours for free.

Not only are they working the equivalent of six months for no pay, the time the placement takes is also stopping them from participating in paid work.

One of Whyalla's recent social work graduates, who wished to remain anonymous, said she had a lot of family support to complete her degree, but even she struggled with the unpaid work.

"I think I personally had it quite easy because I lived at home … but it definitely put a financial strain on me," she said.

"I noticed after my third year placement some people I was studying with got jobs, dropped their hours right back and didn't continue studying full time.

"I know of someone who was studying to do social work and when they found out that they have to do two placements, they decided it wasn't something financially they could do."

Social work students are expected to do two placements over their bachelor degree, 500 hours in their third year and another 500 hours in the fourth year.

The placements are often 9am to 5pm, Monday to Friday, with students also needing to fit in the academic side of their studies, as well as part time jobs if they have them.

"By the end of the week I was just so tired doing placement and work, you're just so exhausted and you are just in survival mode," she said.

A report commissioned by the Australian Council of Heads of Social Work Education proposed social work students should be paid $23.23 an hour by the Federal Government.

That would allow students to receive the minimum wage for their work and make up for a loss of income during the placement.

Another suggestion the report made was to treat students on placement similar to an apprentice with the Federal Government providing host organisations the gross minimum traineeship wage, which is $21.30 an hour.

Stella Newland is currently starting her second year social work in Whyalla, and thinks students need to be paid at least minimum wage while they are working and contributing to their communities during placement.

"I work to be able to afford to go to uni, but it is becoming impossible to still just live at the same time," she said.

Ms Newland is not eligible for many scholarships or help from Centrelink because she earns more than the threshold to receive assistance.

She said if she was not able to save enough money, she might have to drop out because as she does not have family to fall back on.

Ms Newland has even contemplated selling her car so she will be able to pay rent and bills next year.

"It is already hard enough to save, cost of living is really expensive, a lot of the time it's paycheck to paycheck, so I'm really worried about what I am going to do when placement comes around," she said.

"I want a degree, I want to do better and I want to be part of the community and make a change, but I can't do that if I don't have the money to be able to finish placement."

Ms Newland said she was also worried about future representation inside the social work profession because the placements were making it hard for people from lower socio-economic backgrounds to access the course.

"Everyone should have the opportunity because people from lower socioeconomic areas understand what it is like and have a lived experience, and sometimes that is beneficial to being a social worker," she said.

Pirie road resealing gets boost

PORT PIRIE - A recent decision by the Port Pirie Regional Council has reallocated more than a quarter of a million dollars from the Merriton Bridge Project to focus funds on the Road Resealing Program.

At the Wednesday, March 27 council meeting, the council voted to reallocate funds up to $270,000, and to increase the contract with Downer EDI Works to the value of up to $1,610,000 excluding GST for the 2023-2024 Road Resealing Program (Year 2).

This will allow for a majority of the scheduled roads resealing works to be completed without deferral for following financial years.

Recently, the council's executive staff met with the contracted company to review roads identified for resealing where pricing based on the current resealing list has been updated.

Through the process, it was identified that additional funding was required in order to complete the resealing program and to maximise the number of roads that were due to be completed for both asphalt overlay and bituminous spray sealing.

The reasons for additional funding related to a number of factors, including:

- Discrepancies between the actual site measurements compared to the asset data;
- Significant preparation works required to matt (patch) the roads out ready for resealing;
- The cost of raising top stones and manhole covers;
- Line marking;
- Rise and fall costs of bituminous material.

A previous method to assist in mitigating cost impacts was to defer some road segments until the following financial year, however, that could also lead to a backlog of road works.

One of the main concerns raised in the executive team's report indicated that if cost savings could not be found in the following year's budget, the cycle of deferring roads would continue.

The report stated that in some scenarios, thiat continued cycle could lead to additional costs to the council as the deterioration of roads may stretch beyond the serviceability and life and require significant reconstruction and preparation works in future.

While - following the council's decision - a significant portion of funding for the Merriton Bridge Project will instead be allocated to the Road Resealing Program, an appropriate portion will still be available for the council to undertake investigations and designs for the bridge project.

Following the council's vote to carry the motion and reallocate funding, the resealing program for both asphalt and spray sealing are now expected to be completed by the end of April 2024.

As the contract is subject to the rise and fall, and cost estimate measurements, there will likely be some minor fluctuations that will occur to the final project delivery figures.

If excess funds are available, they could be redistributed to the Merriton Bridge project or other required reseal patching or preparation works.

Port Pirie Regional Council

A Word from the Mayor

Hello again isn't this year ticking along so fast!

Easter has already come and gone, I hope you all enjoyed it and had a fair helping of chocolate and most importantly, you spent quality time with family.

We have been busy on your behalf, there has been so many highlights of the month, but I will fill you in with a few to give you the picture.

Soroptimist celebrated International Women's Day with a special guest speaker in the Governor of South Australia Her Excellency the Honourable Frances Adamson AC, who delivered a very powerful speech on the progress of women in positions of power through times. There is still a long way to go strangely, I don't understand why? I feel if you're qualified to hold a position gender shouldn't come into it.

Also, we had a meeting with Care in Motion, a service that provides transport to and from medical appointments and interaction with community. We have been negotiating for an extension to that service to include Crystal Brook and Hawker, all seems to be on track for that to happen.

Consultation seems to play a huge role in everything Council does to ensure we do the right thing for you, our community. This last month, we have been involved in three sessions with the Australian Youth representative to the United Nations, discussing the future of youth and the findings being presented to the United Nations. This was unfortunately not as well supported as I would have hoped considering how important our youth are to our future.

On the other hand, the Crystal Brook Community Association in conjunction with Rural Aid held a workshop at the Golf Club with 80 plus people in attendance and there was such positive input from this community about its future and the pure pride they have in where they live. It was said by Peter from Rural Aid that per capita, Crystal Brook has more services than any other rural towns its size, it's like I say at the end of each column, be proud of where you live.

The next event with community involvement was an Inclusivity Reference Group where we had just over 20 people and 11 Council staff coming along to the Port Pirie Sports Precinct to discuss inclusivity for people living with a disability in our community. Great ideas were put forward and approximately 12 people registered to be included in future consultation. Information gained from the evening paid dividends immediately, because the very next night, Council approved a parking review for the city with emphasis be placed on disabled parking in the CBD. Thanks to Director Infrastructure Kathryn Johnson for working with the Elected Members to ensure this happened.

So, this proves Council is listening and we want the very best for you and we will commit to delivering a beautiful region to live in.

Importantly, we ask for you to continue to support us in gaining information from you by coming along to consultation sessions or if you would like a personal meeting with myself or any of our amazing Elected Members or staff, check in with Council's front office (phone 8633 9777) or email council@pirie.sa.gov.au We would be happy to deliver you the facts and listen to your personal ideas, we won't look for guidance from Facebook please take up the offer to talk to us in person.

Lastly, the rising main work on Wandearah Road has been completed and repairs to roadwork are underway and will be back to normal soon. Council also approved another $270,000 towards our Road Resealing Program, bringing the total for 2023-24 to $1.61 million. Ongoing commitment is still needed so please be patient with us, as you could imagine we fix one area and another area needs repair.

Lastly, we renewed our commitment to the Flinders Mobile Library funding agreement so this important service continues to assist the region.

In closing, as always, please be kind to one another and be proud of where you live.

Mayor Leon Stephens

No shame in asking

RACHEL HAGAN

WHYALLA - Most people are struggling with their day to day cost of living, but help is out there, especially when it comes to food, and all residents need to do is reach out and use Whyalla's services.

Whyalla is lucky enough to have a Foodbank Hub located in Whyalla Norrie, but Childcare worker Fiona Prentis said she felt people were going without instead of accessing the great resource.

In an attempt to spread the word, Ms Prentis organised a tour of the hub as well as $10 vouchers for all the parents who attend her childcare centre, at the Whyalla Baptist Church.

"I got involved with this because I thought it would be beneficial to some of my families, since I work with a lot of special needs children, a lot of households have one parent who can't work and one has to be a full time carer," she said.

"And if you're a single parent, then it is very difficult to work, especially when you have a child with special needs, so I just try to help however I can."

Ms Prentis offered up some of her childcare budget to the Baptist Church in order to acquire the $10 vouchers for the families to use towards their groceries.

She thought this was a good use of her budget because it is opening young families up to a new resource, and one they can also spread to people in their own lives who may also be struggling.

"A lot of people who come in are unsure about how to access community resources and a lot of people feel like they don't deserve the resources, and feel a bit funny about it," she said.

"But we've seen cost of living go right up, especially if you're trying to make healthy meals for your kids."

There is a referral needed to access Foodbank's services, but Ms Prentis said her church or any of the other support services in Whyalla can provide people with the appropriate resources to gain access, and perhaps help with anything else they are struggling with.

"If you're really stuck and experiencing tough financial hardship, then you can approach one of these organisations and they can give you a paid voucher for your food," she said.

Director of Whyalla Stuart Kindergarten Anton O'Reilly has been using Foodbank to supply her children at the kindergarten with healthy snacks for the past four years.

Anton O'Reily and Ruby are stocking up making sure no fresh produce goes to waste. 400536

"It makes a huge difference having all that extra fruit and the bread there as well, especially for the children who attend and may have parents who have forgotten they need to buy fruit," she said.

"We've got to be able to fill in those gaps because a lot of children use up all that energy and they just need to be able to eat more food."

Despite using the Foodbank for this long, Ms O'Reilly said she only learned about the actual extent of Foodbank at Ms Prentis' tour last Tuesday.

"I've learned so much more about the fact we can come in and do shopping for the kindy or we can refer families to come and get their vouchers," she said.

There can be a lot of perceived shame when it comes to asking for help, but Ms O'Reilly said community awareness and education, such as the Foodbank tour, can help break the stigma.

"I think if people see who they view as person who is better off, even though they are probably not because everyone is struggling at the moment, it might help them feel more at ease and comfortable to access those services," she said.

"I think normalising a service like Foodbank is really important to be able to help out everybody in the community."

Call for inspired artists

WHYALLA - The Cuttlefest Art Prize, with a $2700 prize pool, is now open to showcase Whyalla's marine based art from individuals and school groups in time for Cuttlefest 2024.

Artists have the option to create either 2D or 3D inspired by cuttlefish or any other marine life, which will be displayed in the Middleback Arts Centre Foyer throughout the event.

There are seven categories, all with a cash prize, and any resident in Whyalla can submit their piece before 5pm on May 24.

In addition to the major Cuttlefest Art Prize there are six other categories to enter: the Environmental Awareness, the First Nations Artwork, the People's Choice, the Individual Youth (under 13), the Individual Youth (14-25) and the School Group Entry (including Childcare & Kindergarten Groups).

Community Activation Arts and Cultural Facilitator Teresa Coles said she was excited to see what the creative minds of Whyalla had in store.

However, Ms Coles reminded the community there were only two months before the closing date.

"The ever popular People's Choice voting will take place throughout June at the Middleback Arts Centre, with the awards night taking place in early July," she said.

"The artwork will remain on display for the public to admire until the end of July, celebrating the talent within our community."

Team's focus on aged care

LACHLAN SMITH

PORT AUGUSTA - For Port Augusta's older generation, having help by way of services in the effort to stay healthy and engaged is essential.

For that reason, Health Focus Port Augusta has been offering programs which work to assist the elderly.

The team at Health Focus aims to help the elderly maintain social connections, as well as their physical, mental, spiritual and emotional dependence.

Operating under the Port Augusta City Council, coordinator Michele Ryan said the organisation had activities which involved people in a range of activities.

"It helps keep them to stay at home and in their own environment," she said.

The Health Focus team will take clients on excursions, which they will try to run once every four to six weeks, with travel to a nearby city such as Whyalla or Port Pirie for an outing.

A recent day out included lunch with a stop at a winery to enjoy tea and scones in the afternoon

"That was really lovely, and they are the types of activities that we like to try and get out and get them to do," Mrs Ryan said.

There are regular get-togethers such as morning teas and lunches on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays as well as activities.

The Health Focus team will organise other pursuits as well, which may include skittles, board games, volleyball and bingo.

The Bizzi Bodies group on Thursday gathers at the new basketball stadium and carry out chair exercises and other easy activities, and Wednesdays there is a walking group.

Each of the activities is organised through the Health Focus team, and the clients are referred to the group through My Aged Care.

Mrs Ryan said Health Focus works with Country Health Connect, My Aged Care as well as other organisations to bring elderly people together for activities.

"Our clients are usually based from here in Port Augusta but we can if they are happy to come from Quorn as well," she said.

"To register with us you need to be registered with My Aged Care and you do need to contact them," Ms Ryan said.

"Once you are registered with My Aged Care you then ask for a referral to us."

To take part in Health Focus Port Augusta, people need to be aged 65 years or older, and First Nations people can register from the age of 50.

The programs include Let's Keep Active on Tuesdays and Wednesdays from 10.30am to 2.30pm, Walking Group on Wednesday from 8.30am to 9.30am, Bizzi Bodies on Thursdays from 9.30am to 10.30am and the Men's Social Afternoon follows from 11am to 3pm. The Friday group is held from 10.30am to 2pm.

Be ready to roll into Quorn for Railfest fun

QUORN - A milestone event in Quorn is set to celebrate 50 years since the Pichi Richi Railway Preservation Society first ran a train on the original narrow gauge railway line between Quorn and Summit.

The Pichi Richi Railway will hold RailFest in Quorn from July 27-28, where its operating fleet will be fired up and on display in and around the town.

The Pichi Richi Railway Preservation Society will be running short trips for passengers to experience heritage rail travel and steam power.

In addition to showing its fleet, the society will have locomotive workshop tours and activities for people of all ages.

RailFest visitors will also have the opportunity to experience Quorn's award winning Silo Light Show, Pithi Kawi bush tucker trail, Flinders Gin tastings, pubs, shopping, cafes and tea rooms.

The railway through the Pichi Richi Pass was the first section of the Port Augusta and Government Gums Railway which was completed in 1879.

It was later extended and became the Ghan Railway to Alice Springs.

For almost 70 years trains hauled people, coal, troops, livestock, minerals and agricultural products between Port Augusta, Quorn and beyond.

It has been 50 years since Pichi Richi Railway Preservation Society first ran a train on the original narrow gauge railway line between Quorn and Summit, and Quorn is set to celebrate the occasion through a special event.

Picture: JARROD SMYTHE

Preservation Society volunteer marketing coordinator Vicki Parker said in the late 1950s, when a new standard gauge railway line was built to the west of the Flinders Ranges, the line fell into disuse.

"In the early 1970s the line was almost pulled up, but saved by a group of volunteers who formed the Pichi Richi Railway Preservation Society in July 1973," Ms Parker said.

"Their main objective was conserving the bridges and drystone walls along the line."

She said the society subsequently acquired locomotives and rolling-stock and began running steam-powered trains 12 months later, in July 1974.

"Quorn has a wide range of accommodation choices and there is much more to explore in the region," Ms Parker said.

"Pichi Richi Railway is a key tourist destination in the Flinders Ranges, operating between Quorn and Port Augusta, between March to November."

She said all of the society's locomotives, rolling stock, catering, customer service, management, marketing, restoration and compliance departments were managed by dedicated and compassionate teams of volunteers, based in South Australia and interstate.

"In winning the Tourist Attraction - Silver Award, during the SA Tourism Awards, last November, our organisation was recognised for the contribution we make to heritage railway and to tourism," Ms Parker said.

Improved access a must for community

RACHEL HAGAN

WHYALLA - Even though it was a long-weekend that was perfect for a short holiday getaway, hundreds of Whyalla's residents showed up to the Easter Markets on the Foreshore.

This year's markets had a large turnout with 14 stalls, five local vendors and a variety of entertainment with six unique acts.

Many community members were impressed with the great atmosphere and said it was a good end to the uneARThed Festival.

However, issues in relation to access at the event have been raised by the Whyalla Disability Inclusive Reference Group.

A spokesperson for the group said the council had done a fantastic job organising a vibrant event, but it was unfortunate that not everyone was able to enjoy it.

"The layout of stalls posed challenges for those with mobility issues, especially navigating the hilly grass area," they said.

"Better spacing between stalls could alleviate congestion and improve navigation.

"Consideration of a flatter location like Ada Ryan Gardens could be beneficial in the future."

The group said they knew finding a location to suit everyone's needs could be difficult, but rotating locations for the events on an annual basis could at least allow a range of community members to attend each year.

There were also a few concerns for children with different abilities to be able to participate in the annual Easter Egg Hunt, put on by the Seaview Cafe.

Many locals decided to stay in Whyalla over the long-weekend and attended the Easter Markets down at the Foreshore. Picture: GENIENE GORDON

"The Easter egg hunt revealed a need for better accommodation for young children and individuals with disabilities to ensure inclusivity," the group said.

"One suggestion is to have a bunny distribute eggs individually, which could prevent older children from taking them all, reducing disappointment and ensuring everyone can participate."

A spokesperson from the Whyalla City Council said the council wanted to thank the residents who reached out and provided feedback on the Easter Markets event.

"Council recognises there were accessibility issues related to the setup on the day, so this feedback will assist us in improving accessibility for similar events in the future," the spokesperson said.

Cycling dangers

CYCLISTS are being caught without appropriate lights, prompting a reminder about road safety with daylight savings having drawn to an end on April 7.

In 2023, 4,513 cyclists were caught by South Australia Police, riding without appropriate lights at night or a rear reflector, which light up when visibility is low.

South Australia Police said these numbers represent some of the highest numbers recorded in the past decade and a 38 per cent increase on the year prior.

Failure to use suitably reflective lights can risk you a fine of $165 for cyclists (or $382 for drivers).

Crash data also shows vulnerable road users can be at higher risk of a crash when days are shorter, with pedestrian casualty crashes jumping by 24 per cent in autumn and winter between 2018-2022.

RAA Senior Manager Safety and Infrastructure Charles Mountain said the clocks going back is a great time to have a conversation about road safety with loved ones.

"With the clocks going back, a lot more driving and commuting will be happening in the dark in the coming months," Mr Mountain said.

"While it will be lighter in the morning for the next few weeks, many people will be starting or finishing their homeward bound journeys in the dark as of next week."

Game-changing Pirie

KAITLYN GIBBONS

PORT PIRIE - Port Pirie will soon be visited by a game-changing project that aims to break down negative misconceptions about playing and being involved in sport while menstruating.

Game changing. Period is funded by the Office of Recreation, Sport and Racing and Active Inclusion it offers educational workshops around menstruation.

Project lead Jamie Scroop said Game changing. Period was trying to remove the negative narrative periods in sports.

"What we want is for people to feel like they can have open and supported conversation, that's also informed by education," Ms Scroop said.

"So we have an education partner in Pelvic Pain Foundation Australia who is delivering workshops on our behalf.

"We have designed these workshops to be sport-centric, so they're specifically for people who participate in sport as players or their coaches and support personnel as well."

Ms Scroop said Pelvic Pain Foundation Australia wanted to ensure the workshops were inclusive and accessible.

"We don't want anyone to walk into those workshops and walk away a bit worried about what's to come," she said.

"So the workshops are targeted for girls who are a bit younger, maybe they haven't already had a period, maybe receiving some of that information about periods and sometimes periods are painful or you get different types of menstrual conditions that aren't normal."

Pelvic Pain Foundation of Australia clinical educator Sarah Cossar said the workshop would educate athletes, coaches, parents and supporters.

"We educate how periods potentially can impact sport, but then also educating and empowering people to track their cycles, use that information to help inform their training and game days as well as how to manage problematic periods and pain within sport as well," Ms Cossar said.

"The programs are free so we run a session specifically for coaches, supporters, parents and club officials and that's targeted more towards keeping our young people in sport [and] how they, as coaches, can play a really crucial role in supporting people in sport.

"And then we also have the session that is specifically for athletes, which is more targeted towards educating them on their own cycles, how we use cycle tracking as a really great tool but also what they can do to manage potential painful periods and how to connect and engage with health professionals."

Ms Cossar said according to data Pelvic Pain Foundation collected students in regional centres experienced more days of pain and more impacts.

"We also have consistent data that says that a lot of young teenagers - particularly females and those assigned female at birth - miss out on sport," she said.

"Whether that's the discomfort of periods, not being supported by their club or if their periods are so painful they can't continue to participate.

"So our goal is to intervene early by educating how to identify if your period is normal, what you can do about it, what health professionals can help you along the way to keep you active and to keep you in sport because that is our eventual goal.

Game changing. Period will be visiting Port Pirie from June 3 to June 7.

The program is targeted at 15-years-old and over, and younger people who may have started their period earlier, people that may have endometriosis or people who have different cultural backgrounds.

Both workshops are free and sporting clubs are able to book online and once booked Game changing. Period will visit the club or chosen place.

Port Augusta CITY COUNCIL

A WORD FROM THE Mayor

This week we would like to share with you the progress of our significant project aimed at maximising efficiency and importantly, ensuring our community has the necessary properties to cater for the wellbeing and enjoyment of our community. This project is known as our Strategic Property Review.

Council possesses numerous buildings and land assets serving both community services and operational needs, yet many remain underutilised, contributing to a financial strain due to depreciation and operating costs.

The strategic property review aims to:

- Identify and maximise the potential of strategic assets
- Address financial deficits by consolidating and divesting surplus assets
- Better align assets and enhance the value of retained ones

By focusing on fewer, higher-quality, multipurpose facilities, the review seeks to significantly enhance the value proposition for the community. This strategy is anticipated to attract more businesses and residents, ultimately enhancing the region's liveability.

This review was integrated into Council's 2023/2024 Annual Business Plan and it marks a pivotal step towards enhancing our community's resources and ensuring the sustainability of our operations.

In August 2023, Council's Management Group endorsed the project plan, signalling the commencement of the review. Subsequently, in September 2023, Council officially endorsed the project brief, setting the stage for our focused efforts.

Elected Members were nominated to join the Project Team, ensuring diverse perspectives and expertise guiding the review. On October 5, 2023, the Project Team convened to discuss the project scope, setting the groundwork for our collective efforts.

Moving forward from October to December 2023, we were actively engaged in gathering and consolidating data, laying the foundation for informed decision-making. This critical phase sets the stage for thorough analysis, scheduled to take place throughout 2024.

Our commitment to transparency and engagement is evident in the briefing session held on October 24, 2023, where updates were shared with both residents and elected members. Further engagement with Elected Members was held recently on the 26 March.

What are then next steps in this review?

1. Leased/Licensed Properties: We'll delve into properties generating revenue, assessing expenses, and utilisation to maximise returns.
2. Council Assets: Detailed analysis of costs, revenue, and service provision data for both council-owned and private assets will inform our decision-making process.
3. Vacant Land: We'll evaluate the strategic value of vacant land and assess service levels, ensuring alignment with community needs and aspirations.
4. Divestment Opportunities: Consultation with both the Council and the community will be conducted to explore divestment opportunities, including:
   - Residential allotments and other non-community land suitable for immediate divestment.
5. Finalise Review: We'll compile our findings into a comprehensive report and develop recommendations for the Council's consideration.

By June 2024, reports detailing the divestment of assets will be presented to the Council, marking a significant milestone in our journey towards enhanced community value and sustainability.

It is also really important for people to understand what we are doing and of course we would like to reduce any unnecessary concern by keeping you informed. This project is not about selling off everything, it is about continuing to bring sense toward our current and future needs.

Until next time, stay well and stay kind.

EDITORIAL

THIS week we mourn the passing of an esteemed journalist, editor, gentleman and above all, family man.

Greg Mayfield has touched the lives of thousands of people, whether it was through his work, or as a volunteer in his community.

His passion for news took him to his first posting at Whyalla then onto the Recorder, before setting off on a search of stories for the Bendigo Advertiser, Melbourne Sun and the Adelaide News and then returning home to Port Pirie.

For 50 years he has been a valued colleague and friend, and above all, a teacher to so many journalists.

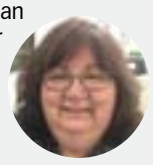

In his body of work, Greg covered the Queen Street Massacre in Melbourne, interviewed Prime Ministers Malcolm Fraser and Bob Hawke, and worked on The Family murder case in Adelaide.

But it was his love of his hometown that drew him back to become a journalist and editor at a community newspaper.

He has published books, and recently he told me he was planning another but didn't quite have the storyline complete as the plot twist needed finessing.

To his wife Ros, and son Louis, who has followed in his father's footsteps, we offer our condolences as we bid farewell to a friend, colleague, family man and a much loved member of the Port Pirie community.

Vale Greg Mayfield.

Farewell my friend

BRENTON VANSTONE

EXACTLY one year ago the editor of the 'Recorder', Greg Mayfield rang me and asked, "How would you like to write a regular column in the newspaper. Perhaps you could write it fortnightly?", then he paused, and with the hint of a question and in a cheeky, quietly probing manner he said, "How about weekly?"

Hence, a weekly column commenced!

He followed my writings and I was looking back over some of his previous text messages and on February 11th this year, my humorous Sunday morning message was, "We will make a journo out of you yet'"

Last Saturday, 6th of April 2024, my friend Greg Mayfield died, and I am sad.

I just loved our in-depth conversations over a coffee in a local hotel or restaurant.

I found him non-threatening and there was always a secure ambience and mutual understanding around those times we spent chatting.

His quiet, gracious humility and calm demeanour were always evident on these occasions.

He was my 'sounding board' on a huge array of subjects and I had so much more to say to him, but the journey has been cut short.

Our families have always been closely intertwined.

My mother knew his father Bill when they worked at Nyrstar, then known as the Broken Hill Associated Smelters.

I went to school with his sister Janet and he was often mentioned in conversation.

The Recorder's columnist, Brenton Vanstone. 344286

I have memories of seeing his picture in the school magazine or in photos of junior football sides.

It doesn't seem to be that long ago because good memories are not diminished by time.

During his amazing 50 year journalistic career he had many postings both here and interstate, before returning to permanently reside in Port Pirie in 1989.

And, it is since then that Greg and I had a continuous interaction during my time spent on local council and afterwards we had shared input on many issues that were pertinent to the machinations of a large regional city - and there is one thing that I must emphasise, at the heart of every article that he wrote there was a deep love for the city of his birth and an ongoing concern for its welfare and economic growth.

Everybody lives with regrets of varying degree, but there are two things that I don't regret that I deeply value and are dear to my heart.

On the 13th May and on the 23rd of November, 2023, I wrote two articles about Greg, highlighting his years of dedication.

Prior to the May article I told him that it would be a tribute piece honouring his 50 year journalistic career, and with all the sincerity, that was a hallmark trait of this man, he quietly said, "I will cherish that."

In that article I wrote:- "Greg spoke fondly of his father who taught him diligence and attention to detail, of his mother who gave him a love of reading and of his wife Ros, who he said tenderly, 'has been my mainstay for decades'."

We know that Greg's life has been cut short just two days prior to his birthday, but if we focus on regrets then we diminish his achievements and the fact that he had loving parents in Bill and Ruth, a caring wife Ros and a son Louis, of whom he was immensely proud.

I said to Greg just last month. "Do you have any regrets over your 50 year journalistic career?"

His reply was quietly emphatic, "No, I just loved it!".....

And we loved you too Greg...

Best property portal named

ADVERTORIAL

FEBRUARY IPSOS data has shown that view.com.au is the fastest growing residential property portal in Australia with a 102 per cent growth in unique audience since October.*

View.com.au's chief marketing officer Paul Tyrrell said it is fantastic to see such strong audience growth on View as we continue to enhance the product and build the brand.

"Our consumer proposition is unique and features over 136,000 properties for sale, however it offers a complete view of the market with access to nearly 11 million properties Australia wide, with buyers able to express interest in properties even if they're not for sale," Mr Tyrrell said.

"All delivered by best in class mapping from Nearmap."

Mr Tyrrell said the marketing campaign is now in full swing and they have seen some massive spikes, particularly from their broadcast partnership with Channel Seven's AFL coverage.

"To be the fastest growing property portal in the country is a testament to the hard work of the team and a clear demonstration of the need for a competitive alternative in the property portal space," he said.

"Our agent partners are enjoying the benefit of this audience growth with our Premium product delivering up to 10 times more enquiry than our free product.

"But we're only just getting started, watch this space."

Comparing October 2023 to February 2024, the majority of portals have declined or have had very low growth*:

- View: 102 per cent growth
- Realestate.com.au: 2.2 per cent growth
- Domain 2.6 per cent decline
- Allhomes: 9.0 per cent decline
- Homely: 0.5 per cent decline

Homely's February total audience dropped to 600 thousand^ with View's February audience over 80 per cent higher at 1.1 million^ according to IPSOS data, with users of View spending on average 2.8 times longer on site than they did on Homely.^

View.com.au is the fastest growing property portal in Australia. 400421 Picture: SUPPLIED

While internal Google analytics data is showing nearly 1.7 million users for the month of February on View.

The executive team behind View includes seven ex-Domain executives that successfully took Domain to a $2.2 billion listing on the ASX and the company is headed up by former Domain chief executive Antony Catalano.

Mr Catalano said the company is seeing the proposition it has built clearly resonating with consumers and we've got great momentum.

"Our Freemium model for agents presents a true alternative to the traditional listings model; it's free to list on View and our low cost Premium product is performing incredibly well and delivering strong value for agents and vendors," he said.

"We can make it free or keep prices low because VMG's business model is not predicated on listings revenue, where the only option is annual price increases.

"We're creating a true property ecosystem that caters to all steps along the property journey. View will soon bring finance propositions to market with our banking partner ANZ.

"While REA continues to cement its number one position, Domain's audience has stagnated and we're seeing some agents downgrading or dropping them from their advertising schedule due to high costs, underperformance and questionable return on investment.

"The industry is fed up with the status quo.

"And despite industry efforts, we are the first genuine challenger to Domain's number two audience position, having been propelled into the number three position for residential property portals showcasing properties for sale in only five months and relegating Homely to the number six portal behind Allhomes.

Hydrogen's new home

ADVERTORIAL

WITH "exciting" works soon to be underway on the delivery of the state's Hydrogen Jobs Plan, the regional town of Whyalla will be a landmark in the future of the world's renewable energy.

Having solar and wind energy already in play, the new Whyalla hydrogen facility - set to start operations in 2026 - will deliver exponential growth to local economies, job opportunities, and access to clean, green energy.

Office for Hydrogen Power South Australia chief executive Sam Crafter said a lot of people were talking about hydrogen and the role it played, but the reason it has been so good goes back to other renewable energy resources.

"Not only do we have a lot of them, we have a really high quality both wind and solar resource; we also have them co-located and co-incident, so that means they operate in a way that gives you a really high amount of renewable energy for longer periods of time," Mr Crafter said.

"This means that if you want to use renewable energy to make things you have a lot, but because we've got such a big resource - 74 per cent at the moment in South Australia of our energy is renewables, we're on track for that to be 100 per cent by 2027.

"We still have billions of dollars worth of projects that are sitting undeveloped in renewable energy because there's not going to be a market for them in South Australia, and the reality of them is the scale of the projects.

"There's not going to be a market for them in the whole east coast of Australia just for electricity supply, because we just simply won't use enough electricity.

"So the question is how do you get those projects developed, and what do you do with that energy; if you've got that energy and you can turn it into products that others will use, then that is how you can unlock that investment.

"And the product that everyone is looking for is hydrogen, particularly hydrogen made from renewable energies."

Already, there has been a lot of activity underway at the site including core drilling to understand any ground issues, and the erection of a sign on the Port Augusta Road indicating the site's location.

Mr Crafter said civil construction work and site preparation works will get underway in the second half of 2024.

"People will really start to notice the site and the formation of that towards the end of the year," he said.

"From there, it just continually rolls on with a whole range of activities happening, some buildings being constructed, electrolysers and facilities, really large scale things, and things will start to come in in quite large modules by ship so we're doing a whole lot of preparation of how we best transport things from the port of Whyalla through to the site.

"It's quite exciting; obviously our project team can't wait to see things come out of the ground and we really understand that the people of Whyalla are excited for that as well."

Premier Peter Malinauskas addressed the gathering at the Port Pirie economic forum.

Plan key to employment

ADVERTORIAL FEATURE

AT the peak of its construction, the Hydrogen Jobs Plan will open the door for around 1000 workers at the Whyalla site, boosting local economy growth and employment opportunities.

Working collaboratively, the Whyalla Hydrogen Jobs Plan and the Port Augusta Technical College will provide expansive opportunities for training pathways and upskilling in the heart of the Upper Spencer Gulf.

Office for Hydrogen Power South Australia chief executive Sam Crafter said it was exciting to be able to see 1000 job opportunities in the sector, and also continued opportunities for growth in the region.

"It's very exciting to be working on a world leading project, it always is, but to be able to do it on behalf of the government where our objectives are broader than just making a profit, our objectives on this project are unlocking the future opportunities for South Australia and South Australians living in regional areas," he said.

"It is a really exciting thing that we can push hard to get a project done that is going to change the way that the world looks at South Australia, but it's also going to change the way in which the world uses hydrogen because we're doing it at a scale that hasn't been done before.

"This will unlock other opportunities to encourage other people to do it at the same scale, and in doing that we're providing a whole lot of opportunities from an economic perspective across South Australia, but at a really tangible level we're seeing something really exciting being built in the Upper Spencer Gulf.

"We're seeing people from the Upper Spencer Gulf being able to work on that, and we're seeing young people being able to have a future where they are able to not only work in South Australia but in their region, and that's a very exciting part of what we do."

With the Port Augusta Technical College set to open in 2025, more job and skill opportunities will be made available for people, starting at a school level.

Mr Crafter said it was important to be able to have these opportunities to get ahead of the demand of jobs that South Australia will experience as the renewable energy industry continues to grow.

"The question is, how are we going to get enough people to do these jobs," he said.

"One of the things we have to do is some particular trade training, so having the technical college which is getting started right from school age through to the trades, and that is important because that means people around the Upper Spencer Gulf will be able to focus on industry experience that's relevant to their communities.

"The way of thinking is moving, it's moving from how do we train people to get the best chance of getting a job, to how do we train people to get the jobs that are going to be available.

"That's the exciting part of it, and it's not just the technical college, there's a whole range of other training, other work around employment programs, to be able to line up with these opportunities as well."

HUGHES NEWS

Hundreds of Whyalla steelworkers are facing the prospect of having their hours reduced leading to a 30 to 40% interim cut in pay due to the curtailment of iron production at the blast furnace. I acknowledge the work that is being done by many workers at the blast furnace to bring it back online. A tentative date of 25th April has been given but given the variables at work that could be sooner or later.

I think we all agree that this is an unacceptable set of circumstances. Our community is highly dependent on the steelworks and the day in, day out work performed by the workforce. Both the workers at the steelworks and our broader community deserve an open and transparent analysis around the circumstances leading to what is the idling of most of the plant and the hard to stomach, proposed, serious interim cut in pay.

I have been in regular contact with the unions, management and individual workers.
Given the seriousness of the situation I have reached out to the Premier and relevant ministers. What our community wants and needs is a degree of certainty about our future. There have been too many promises, often very public promises with much fanfare, and not enough delivery. There have been constant changes in position. We deserve better and the workers that operate and maintain aging assets deserve better.

We must work through this challenge as we have worked through the challenges in our past. On a positive note, people are still employed following the uncertainty around Administration.

We have a large magnetite resource on our doorstep, abundant energy resources, a skilled workforce, a steelworks and a port. Pulling together all those elements will secure our future. The question is, and it is nearly always the question, how and when do we secure the finance to underwrite what needs to be done?

On another important matter for the future of our community, work continues to progress on the State Government Hydrogen Power Plant. Geo-tech work on the site is continuing and we expect to see earthworks commence later this year. All going to schedule that work should start by September/October.

Serious concerns about the Whyalla airport and flights continues. The concerns centre around the need to provide a cross subsidy at a national level to cover ongoing security costs imposed by the previous Federal Coalition Government. Those very high costs were imposed without any ongoing funding agreement. The current Federal Government has also failed to provide assistance to the smaller regional airports. The hypocrisy of Coalition members that attack the current government for failing to do what they failed to do no longer surprises me. At least I am consistent – both governments have failed our smaller regional airports, and we need to continue lobbying to get a change in policy.

The other concern with flights to and from Whyalla is Qantas abusing its monopoly position. That also does not surprise me. The word gouging comes to mind. A few weeks ago, I reached out to a number of Whyalla based organisation that regularly fly to and from Adelaide to see what the impact is on their organisations when it comes to fares.
$600 one way for some flights is ridiculous. Get in touch to share your experiences. Cancellations, delays and high prices is having a whole series of negative impacts – individuals, health services, NGO's and businesses are all impacted. Most Whyalla residents do not fly because of the expense but it is still an important service. Pressure needs to be put on Qantas to do the right thing.

WHYALLA - A few more of Whyalla's playgrounds are about to slide away and start a new life - with the old Taylor Street playground, from Whyalla Stuart, being relocated to Ulannbaatar, Mongolia.

When Whyalla's playgrounds reach the end of their life, by Australian standards, Brian Herd from the Rotary Club of Whyalla and his fellow Rotarians get together and salvage what they can to send across the world for other children to enjoy.

The Rotary Overseas Recycled Playgrounds was started as an environmentally friendly program, which helps disadvantaged communities gain access to play equipment their communities cannot afford.

The program started with just one playground that was sent to a community in Sri Lanka, and has now grown to provide over 50 playgrounds across the world.

Mr Herd said six of the playgrounds had already been installed, but construction had to be put on hold on the last two because during the Mongolian winter the ground becomes so cold it is impossible to dig holes.

According to research from the United Nations and the Veloo Foundation, the establishment of a playground has a direct impact on 1600 children.

And the next pieces of playground equipment that are about to make the long journey are the McEwin Street slide, the George Land flying fox and the Lacey Street climbing equipment.

Many people from Whyalla's community have commented that it was unfair for Australia to send its unwanted goods away to a developing country, but Mr Herd said only the pieces that were good enough would be sent.

In fact, while the playground was being pulled out of the ground, the Rotarians use their skills to patch up any easy fixes they can before it was sent to the storage yard.

"We've got a guy who does welding, so things like ladders, that take you up to the next platform, they corrode," he said.

"So when we pull out the playground we fix those bits up, which are probably just too labour intensive for things like councils to do.

"This is especially when at the end of it, you have a playground that has a good ladder, but then the rest of it, not so much."

Once the equipment is in the storage yard, if it is still deemed unsafe, it will be held and used on other playgrounds to replace missing parts.

Mr Herd said the entire playground is completely pulled apart and all the pieces are thoroughly inspected for corrosion.

"In Australia the rule is after 20 years the playground has to be reassessed and usually gets condemned, so a lot of playgrounds in Whyalla are coming around to that time," he said.

"And then they look at what they have to do to bring them back to standard, and it's usually just to buy a new one.

"If something around your house, like your broom handle cracks, you can choose to tape it up or buy a new one, but some places can't afford to buy a new handle."

The Whyalla City Council said it was currently working on a new strategy for the renewal of the next round of playgrounds in the city.

In the meantime, all of the playgrounds would remain open and it would only be individual items past their use-by-date being removed.

Spend time at mens shed

LACHLAN SMITH

PORT AUGUSTA - Port Augusta Mens Shed members have been busily working on a number of projects at their shed, which are often sold with funds being used to replenish materials or expand on tools, services and such.

The mens shed is a place retired men and veterans can go to be a part of physical and social activities.

Volunteers who have a background in a trade are welcome to become involved.

Some of the projects include repurposing furniture, creating wooden toys, mending broken items and crafting special pieces which have been requested by a range of organisations.

Donations, grants throughout the year and the items the members sell help the shed continue to operate.

Members are often selling items at the Stirling North Markets, which have included toy trains, cradles and wine racks.

The group has put together a folder of items which have been built for people to have an understanding of what the members work on, and give them an idea on items they might want to purchase.

Port Augusta Men's Shed coordinator Carol Winen said the mens shed was a government funded program.

People will contact Ms Winen if they would like the shed members to repair a piece of furniture or another item.

At the shed there is a welding bay, a woodwork shop, a paint area and a room where members can socialise.

The men are welcome to sit down in the lunch room and connect with each other if they do not wish to partake in the other activities.

"It is a social place where they can come sit down and have a cuppa, have a chat," Ms Winen said.

Ms Winen encouraged men who were feeling isolated at home to visit the shed and spend time with their mates.

"We might have a guest speaker come in and talk about diabetes and you will see all these guys talk afterwards," she said.

Members often start the day with a cup of tea until 9.30am before they get started on their projects then they enjoy lunch together at around 12noon. The shed received a donation from the Port Augusta Younger Veterans Association for $2000, Quorn Wilsden Football Club donated $2150 and it was nominated for the Commonwealth Bank Donation program where they received $5000.

This allowed the men to upgrade and replace the tools and welder.

The group welcomes more donations of tools which they will test at the shed.

"These guys will drive around and we might find pallets so they can pull them apart to make things with the pallets," Ms Winen said.

"It is good place to work and they are a bunch of great fellas.

Ms Winen said the group welcomes any new members.

The Port Augusta Mens Shed is located at the corner of Railway and Carlton parades, with members meeting on Mondays and Tuesday, from 9am to 2pm.

Members must be 65 years old or older and register through My Aged Care and there is a fee of $3 each time they attend.

Member Graeme Barton said he enjoyed spending time with his mates at the shed.

"It is just about enjoyment... blokes will come in and they will play cards," Mr Barton said.

"You do not have to do anything, it is just for blokes to be out with other blokes."

Helping to support Whyalla youth centre

THE Whyalla Plaza Youth Centre (PYC) has recently received a generous donation, investing in the continued service for the local community.

Port Adelaide Football Club has partnered with GFG Alliance's Whyalla operations, Liberty Primary Steel and SIMEC Mining to support the PYC and has donated two signed guernseys for a charitable auction.

The Whyalla PYC is hoping that all money raised from the two guernseys will provide the final funds needed to buy the Colebrook Street building the service has called its home for the past 27 years.

PYC spokesperson Tamy Pond said that due to high demand for housing in Whyalla the PYC needed to buy its residence to continue providing its services and a safe place for its 800 registered members.

"The Coleman Street centre is ideally located for those who rely on it the most and has been adapted to purpose suit its members' needs," she said.

"The young people who come here, and depend upon this service, describe the building as their house.

"The PYC has raised nearly $200,000 so far, so these funds from the Port Adelaide and GFG guernsey auction will hopefully be enough to push us across the line and secure our home."

Ms Pond said the PYC reached out to GFG Alliance for support as its partnership with Port Adelaide was seen as an ideal opportunity for a final-push fundraiser.

GFG Alliance most recently provided funding for the centre through its Community Support Program, which helped the PYC take 50 young netballers to Adelaide to compete in an annual carnival.

"GFG and Port Adelaide are fantastic supporters of our community so we saw an opportunity to draw on that partnership to help in this venture and raise awareness of a local organisation in need," Ms Pond said.

"Port kindly donated two 2024 guernseys signed by the leadership team and coaches with GFG further assisting with the auction and promotion."

The first guernsey is available via a silent auction by registering bids at communitysupport@gfgalliance.com including full name, contact phone number and bid amount.

The auction will close on April 15.

The second guernsey is being raffled with $1 tickets available at various Whyalla business outlets or by contacting Tamy Pond on 0418 244 400.

Donations to the PYC can also be made directly to Plaza Youth Centre by contacting PYC Coordinator Joanne Jones on 8645 3999 with all proceeds going towards the purchase of the Colebrook Street headquarters.

Great love of netball

In the Spotlight

SUE DALLA SANTA

PORT AUGUSTA - Sue Dalla Santa recently sat down to speak with Venessa Blinman about her love of all things netball and family.

HOW DID YOU GET INVOLVED WITH NETBALL?

I played in Sydney before moving to Port Augusta.

My aunt, Michelle Hertel, was heavily involved with St Josephs, in 1994 I decided to have a year off playing to dance and she coaxed me into umpiring.

I attended the Saturday lunchtime umpiring sessions run by Maureen Ryan.

I still have, and use, the original whistle which is quite sentimental as I have my maiden name Luvisi engraved on it.

I am now a C grade umpire. The reason I continued the umpiring journey was due to the shortage.

Basically, if there is no umpire there is no game.

It certainly is not the best role in netball.

I do like the new rules especially the tactical ones. Hopefully the teams use the changes in the best spirit of the game.

WHEN DID COACHING INTEREST YOU?

Whilst still having an umpiring role I transitioned to coaching in 1995/1996.

My first representative coaching experience was in 1999 for the under 11 team that consisted of Libby Harrison, Carmen Skinn, Chloe Grantham, Casey Lukich, Tara Hogg, Janelle Puddy, Kischa Stuart, and Mia Evens.

Saint Joesphs Netball Club president of 15 years Venessa Blinman outlined what inspires her and her involvement throughout the years in local netball. Picture: SUE DALLA SANTA Interestingly I have also coached Bridie Lukich, Casey's daughter.

It is amazing what juniors can achieve from such a young age.

Libby and Casey have both won the A grade Best and Fairest Transcontinental Medals.

WHAT IS YOUR ROLE IN ST JOSEPHS NETBALL CLUB?

It is my 15th season as president, I coach and umpire as well as mentor coach.

I am a life member with the club and PANA.

It has been a rewarding time. The strength of the club is the excellent work the committee members and supporters provide with grading, scoring, umpiring, coaching roles as well as social events for players.

HAVE YOU ANY MEMORABLE MOMENTS?

Yes, the family holiday when we touched down in Los Angeles. It was a trip of a lifetime.

Craig and I along with our children, Kallan, Jaxson, and Addison, got to experience so much that we had seen on TV.

It was an unbelievable reality being a spectator at NBA games, ice hockey, baseball and taking a helicopter ride over the Grand Canyon, the fun time at Disneyland, riding around Central Park on bikes.

It was amazing.

In May 2020, during COVID we included Buster, a Cavoodle who is our spoilt 'fur baby', into the family.

It is always a proud moment when your children achieve their goals and are happy in life.

Kallan is off to university to study towards a teaching degree.

Jaxson, being an Essendon supporter was in raptures over their St Kilda, win, a team his brother supports.

Addison received Falcons Basketball Club Person of the Year Award - apart from being a player, for her volunteer coaching and umpiring roles, which is great seeing her give back to her community like we do.

DO YOU HAVE A ROLE MODEL?

My Mum, Helen Luvisi, with her energy, and determination to achieve milestones while still selflessly supporting our close-knit family.

She is an inspiration to us all.

I do have a busy life with work, keeping up with the kids' activities. Craig is most supportive and is active with sporting roles like me.

In downtime I love to read. Overall life is great, albeit busy.

Drop-in for energy info sessions

EPIC Energy is holding two drop-in sessions in Whyalla this week where the community can learn more about their part in the state hydrogen project.

The sessions will be held in the Vicki Ledo Room, at the Whyalla Public Library on Wednesday April 10 from 2pm to 5pm, and Thursday April 11 from 9am to 12pm.

A representative from the Office of Hydrogen Power SA will also be available to answer any questions about the Hydrogen Jobs Plan.

This is a chance for the community to ask more questions and provide any feedback they may have.

Last October it was announced Epic Energy was selected as a preferred partner to develop the integrated pipeline and hydrogen storage solution.

Chief Executive Officer of Epic Energy, Clive D'Cruz said the company was excited to be a part of the decarbonisation of South Australia, which will benefit generations to come.

"The proposed Whyalla Hydrogen Pipeline, a part of the Hydrogen Jobs Plan project, to be constructed by Epic Energy, would store and transport hydrogen produced at the new purpose built hydrogen production facility in the North of Whyalla," he said.

Epic Energy will be responsible for a dual-purpose storage and transmission pipeline, which will provide infrastructure connections for hydrogen production expansion.

Fishers receive praise

SOUTH Australian recreational fishers have been praised for complying with fishing regulations over the Easter long weekend.

Over the weekend, a total of 98 per cent of people checked found to be following the rules.

More than 2500 fishers had their catches checked in a statewide sweep over the four day weekend with only 30 on the spot fines issued and 26 cautions.

Department of Primary Industries and Regions director of operations fisheries and aquaculture, Benn Gramola said he was pleased that such a high percentage of fishers checked complying with the rules.

Mr Gramola said that by following rules and regulations, it further demonstrated the community's understanding of the need for sustainable fishing.

"While one person not complying with our fishing regulations is one too many, [the] reality is there will always be a few who – intentionally or accidentally – do the wrong thing," he said.

"Just over two per cent of those checked is a very good demonstration of people understanding the importance of compliance to protect our fish stocks.

"Our recreational fishing regulations are designed to preserve and conserve the state's aquatic resources to ensure this very enjoyable and important activity can be sustained for future generations.

"Most offenses were related to undersized fish with one group receiving a total of $3000 in fines making it a very expensive day out."

Fisheries officers employed by the Department of Primary Industries and Regions SA play an important role in enforcing, as well as informing and educating fishers about all rules and regulations that entail recreational fishing.

Fisheries officers are also well supported by the state's fishcare volunteers, who operate in eight teams across the state, and raise awareness of fish stocks and the regulations that apply to recreational fishing.

Anyone wishing to report any suspicious or illegal fishing activity can contact their local fisheries officer, or call FISHWATCH on 1800 065 522.

People can also submit an online report at www.pir.sa.gov.au/fisheries/fishwatch.

Reports can be made anonymously.

Path to make a difference

In the Spotlight

RACHEL HAGAN

WHYALLA - Like many people after high school, Zia Westerman felt lost, but unlike most other people she did not have the luxury to go out and find herself.

Despite not having the ability to leave her house unaccompanied, she has found a piece of herself through serving the community and standing up for people's basic rights.

After finishing school Ms Westerman was essentially trapped in her home, sitting at her kitchen table with her sister, Cyanne, day in and day out because there were not enough services in Whyalla to help them leave their house.

Ms Westerman said the situation had a severe impact on her mental wellbeing and it was hard to get through this tough period of her life.

"We did have wheelchairs, but it was too unsafe because we do need a lot of help to do everything," she said.

"We basically sat at the kitchen table with our laptop for the whole day, it was very boring, we just watched a lot of movies."

Before the Westermans moved to their current home, they were living in a small house which did not cater well for their wheelchairs at all.

"Every time someone wanted to go to the fridge, we had to move … and we would have to sit in our bedroom doorways just to watch TV, it was crazy small," she said.

Zia Westerman said the best thing about living in Whyalla is the supportive community, which she loved representing. 399250

Finding work was also a challenge for the Westermans because it was difficult finding a suitable role where their needs were recognised and their skills were valued.

Ms Westerman said such isolation from the world and lack of stimulation led her to studying a range of qualifications.

"I always wanted to be a palaeontologist or an archaeologist because I was quite interested in that back then … but if I wanted to study that I had to move out and that wasn't possible for me," she said.

Though that dream was not possible, Ms Westerman did study a Diploma of Professional Writing, a Certificate in Business Management and a Certificate in Legal Services.

All of the courses have given her a great background knowledge in law and communication, which has led her to study a Bachelor of Criminology and Criminal Justice, where she is currently thriving.

"The subject I'm doing now is on human rights, I'm finding that really interesting," she said.

"I can relate a lot to it, so I'm trying to figure out what exactly I can do in the future with it,."

Now Ms Westerman has found her passion, she will be completing her last term as an elected member at the Whyalla City Council.

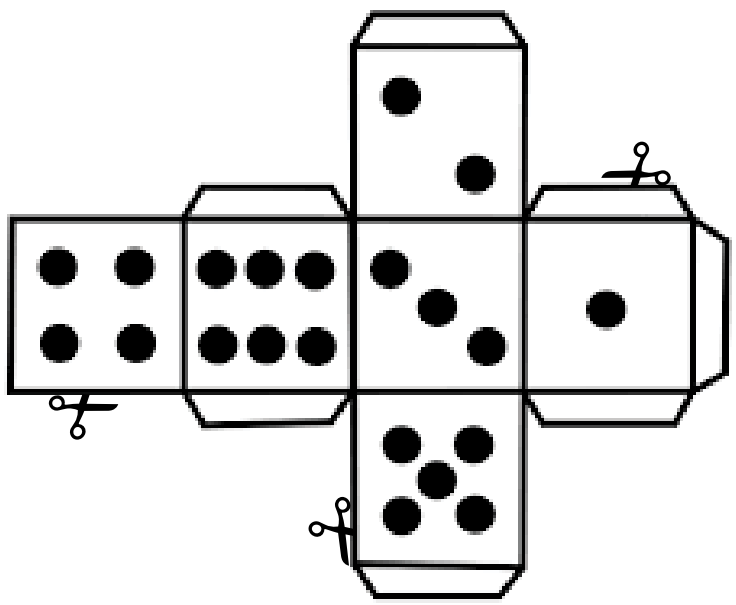

"I was really surprised I got in [the council] the first time, I was only one or two points off from another … but the second time I ran, I was actually quite high and I was even more surprised," she said.

Her role has caused Ms Westerman to be a bigger part of the community and she believes she was elected because people noticed her advocating for people struggling living with a disability.

Since being an elected member Ms Westerman said she hoped to make a difference in accessibility at local events and popular places in the community, so everyone was able to get out and enjoy the beauty Whyalla has to offer.

"I want to focus more on my studies at the moment, but I might run again in the future," she said.

SNAKES AND LADDERS

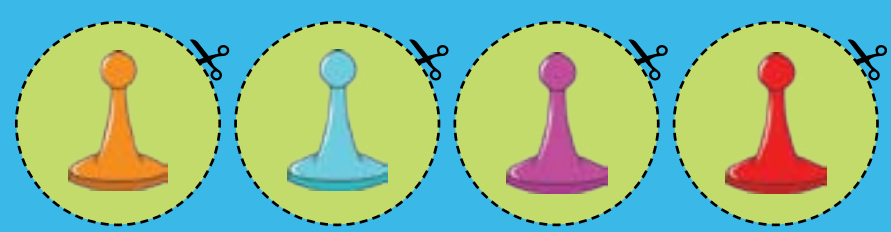

Cut out the dice. If possible, stick or print on card to make it stronger.
Fold along the dotted (- - -) line and glue the shaded parts together.
Cut out the counters. If possible, stick or print on card to make them stronger.

How to play:

- Each player puts their counter on the space that says 'start here'.
- Take it in turns to roll the dice. Move your counter forward the number of spaces shown on the dice.
- If your counter lands at the bottom of a ladder, you can move up to the top of the ladder.
- If your counter lands on the head of a snake, you must slide down to the bottom of the snake.
- The first player to get to the space that says 'home' is the winner.

Upper Spencer Gulf holiday fun for everyone

IT is quite often hard to keep children, and adults, entertained over the school holidays and amusing kids can be a costly exercise but there are ways to have a fun time without having to reach for your wallet every day.

- PICNIC IN THE PARK - Have the children help to make sandwiches, fill water bottles and cut up fruit so they can enjoy a picnic in the park. It is especially nice if the park has stimulating play equipment to enjoy and make sure to take a ball to have some fun.
- MAKE A MOVIE DATE - Hire or borrow a couple of movies or tune into a streaming service, pop some popcorn and sit and enjoy some family time.
- PAY A VISIT - Most museums and art galleries are either free or are relatively cheap. Plenty of them also have interactive displays where children can learn about things or create masterpieces.
- ACTING OUT - Get your children to either write or dictate a play – with a beginning, middle and end – and then get them to act it out, ready for a performance in front of family and friends.
- MASQUERADE BALL - With some paper plates, elastic, string, feathers, glitter, paint and more, create some beautiful masks to wear at the family's masquerade ball.
- BACKYARD CAMPING - If you already have a tent this is a cheap adventure. You can enjoy some toasted marshmallows, watch the stars and moon, tell spooky stories and play some games in the dark.
- PLANT A GARDEN - You can either dig up a part of your garden or find some old pots, containers, almost anything to plant some herbs and vegetables. Make sure you create tags to label your plants.
- TREASURE HUNT - Hide some treasure, it could be a treat or money, and create a treasure map which will have clues at different stops along the way. This could keep them busy for hours.
- FINE JEWELLERY - Gather some string or elastic and different macaroni shapes and sizes and you have the beginning of a beautiful necklace. Some non-toxic paint could make it a colourful treasure.
- GO FISHING - If you have some fishing rods, dig up some worms or buy some bait and spend the day relaxing under a tree or on a beach with your rod cast. Who knows, you may even come back with dinner.
- LEAF RUBBING - All you need is some paper, crayons or pencils and you are almost there. Take the children for a walk around the park or even just up and down the street to find some fantastically shaped leaves. Put the paper over them and rub gently with the crayon.
- LIBRARY VISIT - Over school holidays there are usually some types of free activities at the public library. You can also teach your children how to borrow items such as books, toys and even DVDs.
- FASHION SHOW - Grab some of the adults older, disused clothing – including shoes and handbags – and let the children put on a fashion show with a difference. You could even film it for them to review later when they settle.
- TEA PARTY - Get out the crockery and teapot, makes some dainty sandwiches, fairy bread and biscuits and sit down to enjoy a quiet moment as you all enjoy afternoon tea. You may even want to dress for the occasion.

Remarkable CEO farewelled

LUKE MILLER

Mount Remarkable's soon to depart chief executive officer Sam Johnson. Picture: SUPPLIED

THE highest ranking employee of a remote council deep into the state's north is set to move on in favour of a similar role within a regional city located away from mainland Australia and across the Bass Strait.

District Council of Mount Remarkable mayor Stephen McCarthy revealed chief executive officer (CEO) Sam Johnson has resigned and would take up the same position at City of Launceston council (CoL) in Tasmania.

He said Mr Johnson had been instrumental in leading and re-organising council over a four year tenure, during which time he received an Order of Australia Medal for outstanding service to Local Government.

"When Sam arrived, he had a significant task ahead of him, (but) he and his team have delivered many operational and strategic outcomes, which have positioned us well for the future," mayor McCarthy said.

"We wish him every success in his new role, and the people of Launceston are fortunate to have secured someone so enthusiastic and forward thinking who I have no doubt will deliver great results for them."

Mr Johnson - who played a large part in developing the district's new rail trail - said he was very pleased with what had been accomplished in quite a short time frame and with "such limited resources" available.

"This in itself, is a testament to the people of 'Team Remarkable', who should be proud and reflect on the many great things we have all achieved here, and I will now watch from afar with great pride," he said.

"What a wonderful opportunity CoL has offered me in one of the most beautiful, diverse, and fastest growing cities in Tasmania, (where) I am looking forward to building new relationships with the wonderful staff and community members alike while providing the very best service levels to the community."

CoL mayor Matthew Garwood said he was pleased to announce the appointment after an extensive national and international recruitment process conducted by the council over the past four months.

"We attracted a very large field of close to 40 high-quality candidates, but despite tough competition, Sam impressed the councillor team with his vision, high-energy approach, and obvious passion," he said.

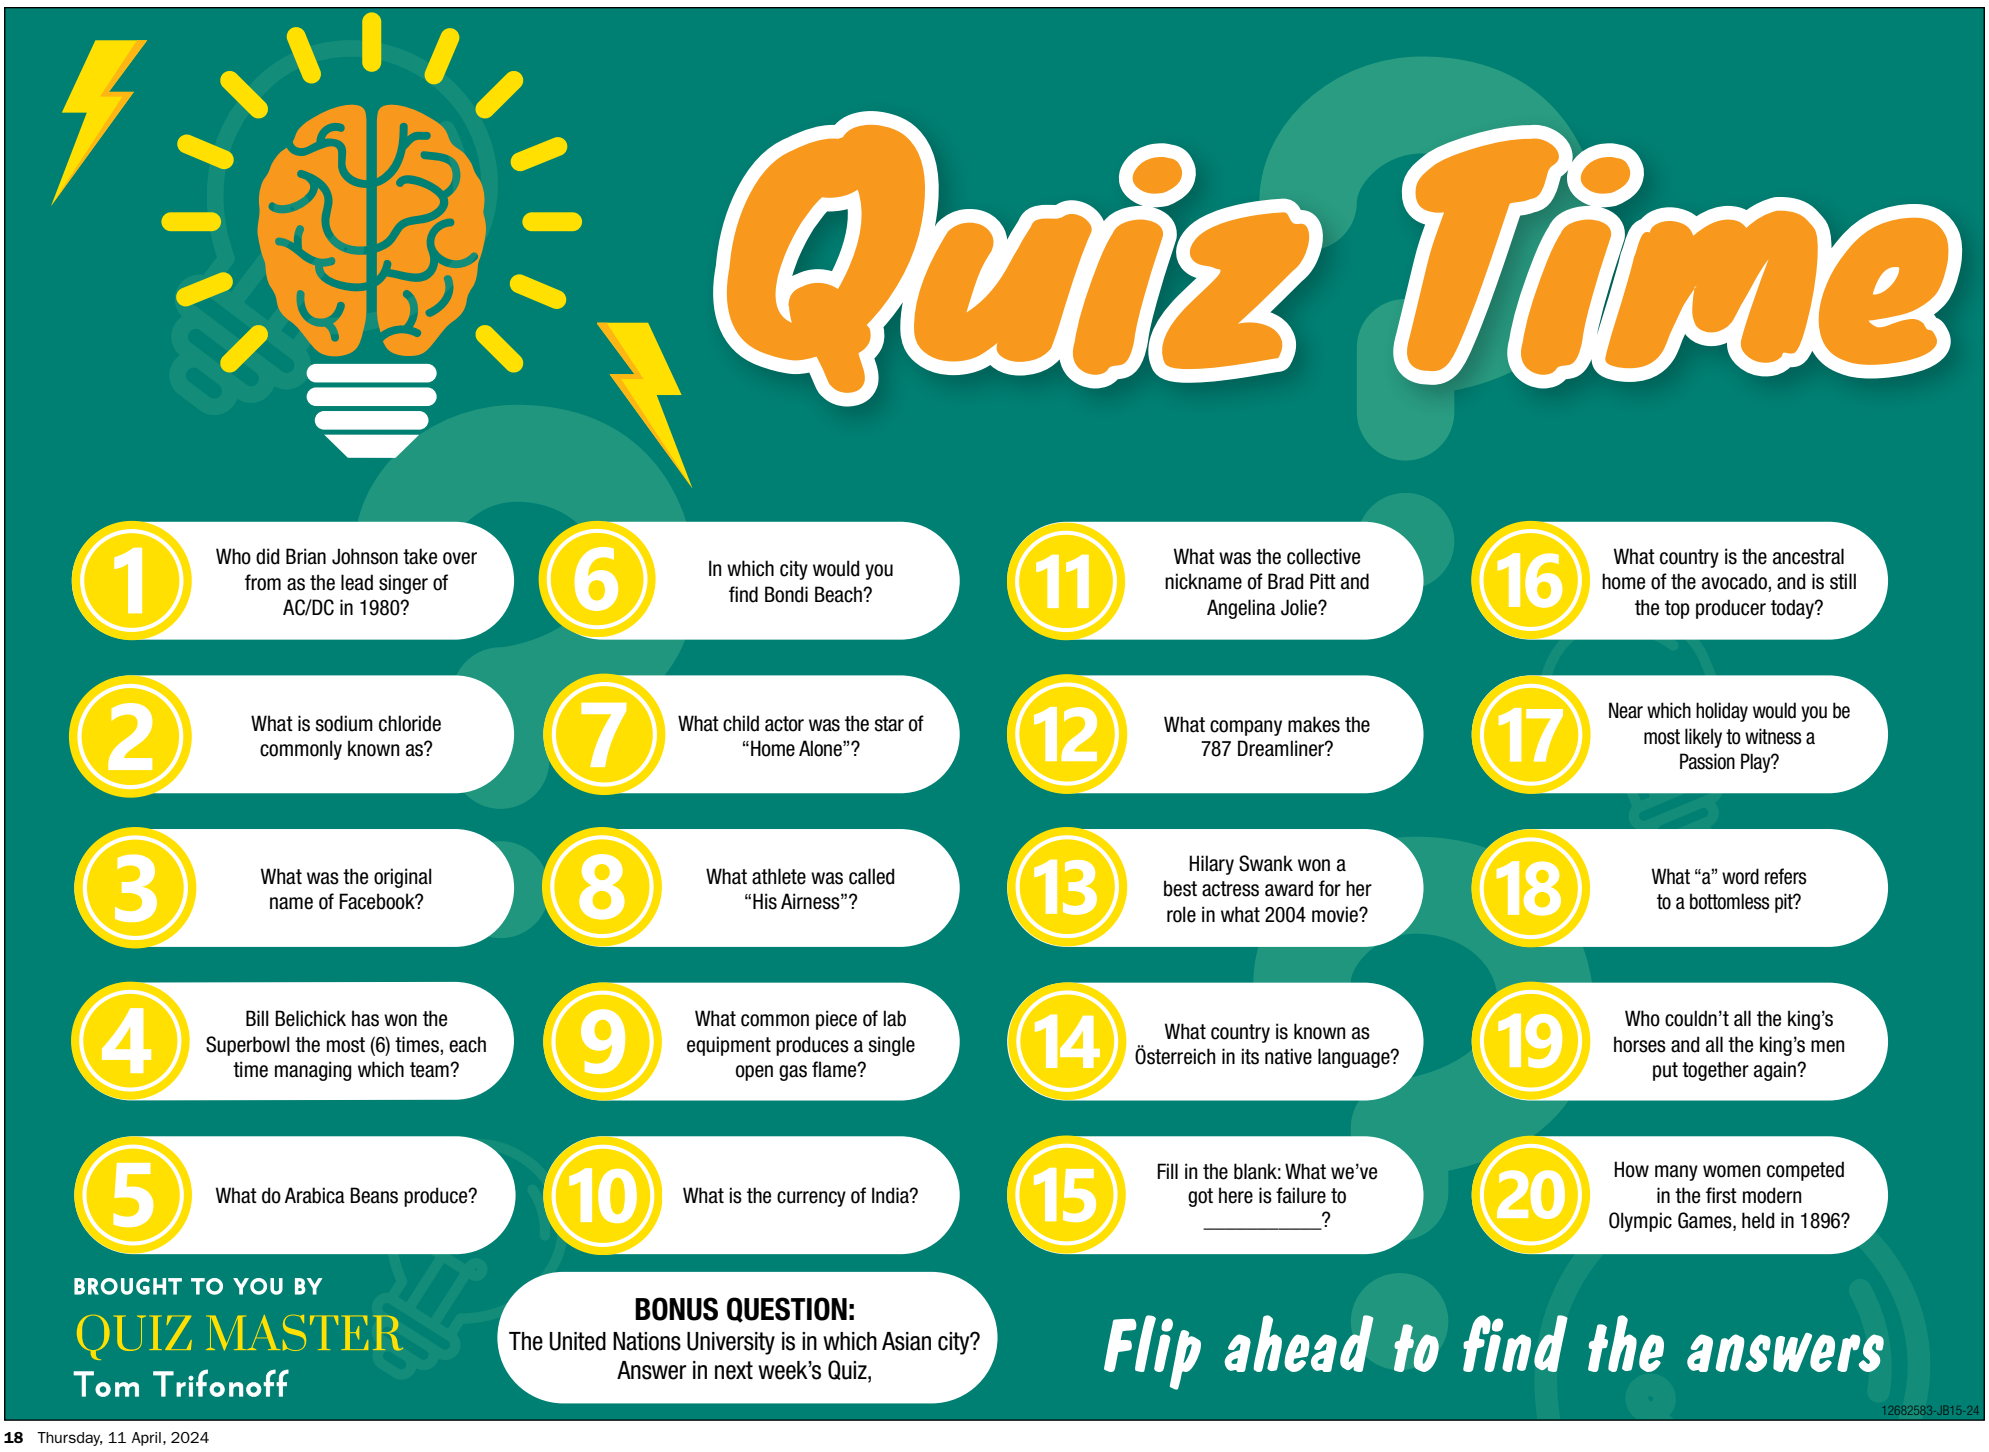

"Sam has multi-sector experience, having worked earlier in his career in senior roles with ANZ along with five years as a very young mayor at Port Augusta City Council.

Mr Johnson is expected to take up his new post in July, after he moves to the Apple Isle in the coming months with his wife and three young boys.

He is set to replace Michael Stretton, who had been chief executive officer in Launceston since 2017, but was poached by the City of Hobart late last year, meaning Infrastructure and assets general manager Shane Eberhardt had served as the interim CEO since then.

Some of the projects Mr Johnson completed in his time at Mount Remarkable include, the Bluff Lookout, the Rail Trails, Remarkable Southern Flinders Project, a full governance review, the establishment of the Flinders Alliance, and a Financial systems review.

According to council he also implemented corporate branding, improved staff culture and organisational efficiencies, leveraged significant grant funding opportunities, and enhanced organisational capacity.

Students go on art journey

NERALIE BAILEY

PORT PIRIE - St Marks Benedict campus has a beautiful new mural, which was unveiled on April 5 in a ceremony attended by Mayor Leon Stephens, artist Judith Crosby-Woods and invited guests.

St Marks College Indigenous Liaison, Jenna George, said that one of the special parts of the artwork and the process of creating it was the beautiful relationship that students developed with Ms Crosby-Woods.

"Today we will formally thank her for her work in not only creating this amazing piece of artwork that sits in the heart of our school.

"But also the relationships she built with staff and students through her work.

"We have loved the opportunity to share culture with her."

Year six student Madeline said that her favourite part of the mural was how it had different shades of blue for the water of the Port Pirie River.

"It's very colourful. There are many signs of acknowledgement of the Nukunu people. The snake represents the people. I love how many different symbols there are, of all shapes and sizes."

Year four student Jacob said that seeing the handprints in the mural made him think about the Aboriginal people.

"The river flows through the middle and it is brown and it looks like a snake.

"I see plants from the environment.

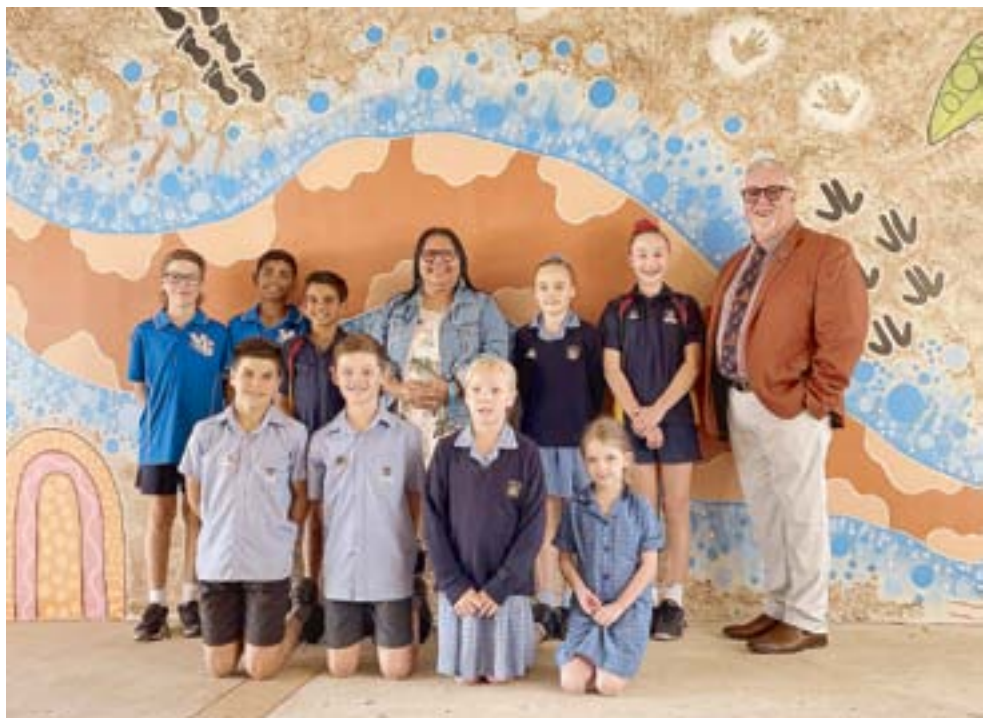

"I loved helping put my handprint on the wall."

Xzavier in year six said that the mural was telling a story.

"The Nukunu people believe in a rainbow serpent and that it made the hills and cliffs.

"It looks like it's sleeping in a waterhole."

Ms George said that Ms Crosby-Woods built relationships with students prior to starting the mural by visiting each class to talk about culture, share her own story as an artist and Aboriginal woman and share her art knowledge.

Students were involved in hands on art activities including song and creating tracks in the sand, nature collages with native animals and jewellery making and beading.

"Our Student Representative Council went on to use Judy's bead making lessons to create jewellery which they sold at lunch time raising over $600 for the Indigenous Literacy Foundation.

"Judy's connections with the students and staff allowed her to understand our community and this is reflected in the art work she created for us.

"We are continuing to build on this connection and relationship in 2024 as we plan for Judy to create art installations for our Junior Primary area connected to our school values of Faith, Resilience, Respect, Service and Compassion," Ms George said.

Artist Judith Crosby-Woods was born in Port Augusta in 1969.

From strong connections through Wankangurra and Low Southern Arrente from her grandmother and Yankuntjatjara from her grandfather, she is a proud Aboriginal woman. Her artwork features vibrant colours and defined imagery of bush food and flora such as berries, bush tomato, honeysuckle, wild bush flowers, and tracks imprinted on the land.

Through her art, Ms Crosby-Woods said she is able to share the richness and connections to culture and land and the knowledge that has been passed from grandmother to mother to daughter.

Ms Crosby-Woods wants to ensure Aboriginal Cultural knowledge and appropriateness is implemented as part of the Australian Curriculum at the schools she works in partnership with.

In collaboration with several organisations to she has created murals and shared cultural knowledge and wellbeing as well as her passion for strengthening change in Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people in education, health and wellbeing.

To inspire other Aboriginal people is what drives her passion in Culture through art and design, ensuring the knowledge is passed to her children through art and storytelling.

Katie Pole, Deputy Principal, Bosco campus, said that the school community was excited about the impact of the new mural.

"Every person who enters Benedict Campus will be struck and inspired by the power of this mural and all that it represents.

"As people walk through the campus, the mural will be a special feature of a visit to Benedict due to its location, beauty and scale,

"The College over the past 10 years has been working to strengthen Indigenous access, cultural safety, engagement and empowerment.

"Currently we are working on completing a new Reconciliation Action Plan.

"In this plan we have ambitions to build upon works such as this to create more visual items as well as meaningful actions to demonstrate the College community's commitment to supporting, recognising and celebrating First Nations culture, issues and people.

"We are thankful that our staff and students who chose to work on this project with Judy and were able to contribute their ideas and perspectives on the stories they wanted to tell.

"The mural will educate and inspire for many years to come."

Flinders' symphony of sound

THIS month, the Adelaide Symphony Orchestra (ASO) will be making its way to the Southern Flinders Ranges for a night of music including Mozart, Beethoven and Brahms.

The symphony orchestra will be led by Guy Noble who has worked with a wide variety of international performers including Harry Connick Jr, Ben Fold, The Beach Boys, Randy Newman and Olivia Newton John.

Mr Noble said the ASO was bringing a super popular program full of highlights.

"Even featuring our tuba player Stanley McDonald as a soloist," he said.

"We had a great time when we came to Port Pirie a few years ago, so I'm looking to returning with a new bag of music and the amazing talents of the Adelaide Symphony Orchestra."

Mr Noble will take concertgoers on a journey through classical music moments from the drama of Bernstein's West Side Story to the cheekiness of Leroy Anderson's Typewriter.

Leading up to the concert in Port Pirie, the ASO will also be performing a series of free, family-friendly community concerts in Crystal Brook, Koolunga and Peterborough.

Those concerts will be hosted and conducted by violist and Adelaide Youth Strings director, Martin Butler.

Concert goers should expect an unusual take on Beethoven's Ode to Joy, with Brian Balmages' Ode to a Joy Ride and also experience the charm of Morricone's Cinema Paradiso.

The audience could even learn to play the violin as a soloist with the ASO.

There are limited spaces available - to book a ticket visit www.aso.com.au

Crystal Brook: Wednesday April 17, 10.30am, Crystal Brook Institute, free concert

Laura Fair fun set for April

LAURA - The 2024 Golden North Laura Fair returns on this weekend, April 13 and 14 and with it, the townswells from 650 people to more than 10,000.

This year the event changed from its traditional dates of the first weekend in April to avoid clashing with the AFL Gather Round.

Kicking off the festivities at 11am on Saturday, the street parade will feature floats, vintage cars and farm machinery, marching bands, emergency services vehicles and local school children's costume parade.

This will be followed by the official opening of the Golden North Laura Fair at 12.30pm by Geoff Brock, Member for Stuart, and John Keipert.

Inside the fairground more than 100 stalls will be selling a huge variety of products, including local fresh produce, plants, handmade and Australian made jewellery, children's clothes and toys, homewares, hand-crafted foods and much more.

Expansive shady lawn areas provide the perfect spot to relax and take in live music from the 60s, 70s and 80s with 'The Jukebox Boys' while enjoying delicacies from one of the many food vans and coffee carts.

With Golden North back as the naming rights sponsor it is fitting the iconic Golden North Ice Cream Eating Competition will be front and centre on Sunday.

Thousands gather for the Laura Fair each year. Picture: FILE

As the sun sets on a fun-filled Saturday in Laura, the energy levels go up a notch with Adelaide party band 'The Uber Beats' playing into the night.

Food stalls will remain open for dinner and a licensed bar will serve drinks until late.

The Rocky River Historic and Arts Society's Art Exhibition is open in the Courthouse Art Gallery all weekend, with the official opening at 7.30pm on Friday night.

Laura's local stores along the main street will also be open for business all weekend, so make sure to take a stroll around town and see what is on offer.

Held annually since 1980, Laura Fair Committee chairperson Virginia Ferguson said the Golden North Laura Fair continued to grow thanks to volunteers and sponsors.

"The Golden North Laura Fair is entirely volunteer driven and generates substantial economic benefit for local businesses and community groups alike," she said.

"The Golden North Laura Fair would not be possible without the generosity of our sponsors.

"We are also grateful for the South Australian Tourism Commission's support through the Regional Event Fund."

To avoid the queues, head to Humanitix to buy tickets early with prices $5 for adults, $2 for children and $15 for families.

Tickets bought for the 2024 Golden North Laura Fair will support a good cause with 10 per cent of all ticket sales being donated to the Royal Flying Doctor Service SA/NT.

Peterborough art, culture festival a success

PETERBOROUGH - Stretching across the Easter weekend, the annual Peterborough Art and Cultural Festival saw perfect autumnal weather set the town abuzz, with many visitors and locals attending the exhibitions of quilting from the Peterborough Patchworkers, the historic Printworks, the fascinating Wireworks and Papier Mache at the Goods Shed, the Craft Fair at the Art Centre and the Community Garden, to name a few.

For the younger people was a disco and art display at the Youth Centre, a Creature Feature movie in the Steamtown Theatrette with a classic newsreel from the 1970s, a Tweety Bird and Sylvester the Cat cartoon, followed by the main event, "The Giant Claw", a 1950s classic.

At the official opening of the Peterborough Art Prize on Thursday night, committee chairperson Mike Hainsworth and Mayor Ruth Whittle welcomed guests, artists, and judges of the four categories - Sculpture, Stitchery, Photography and Painting.

The winner of the painting section was Hans Koppan. A full list of winners can be seen by visiting prac.org.au.

Saturday was particularly busy with the festival markets, a concert by the Peterborough Singers in St. Peter's Anglican Church, a karaoke night at the Junction Hotel as well as all the ongoing exhibitions.

All the churches held their traditional Easter Services, with many visitors attending.

Sunday morning's Easter Egg hunt in Victoria Park was followed by the Ute, Truck and Automotive Show in Don Ferguson Drive which is always a popular event.

With Easter being early this year, the weather was quite warm, but a heavy downpour late on Sunday afternoon only added to the excitement, with rain always welcomed in Peterborough.

The theme for the 2024 Festival was "Reuse - Recycle"; and there were some excellent works around the town to highlight the theme.

Once again, the Peterborough Art and Cultural Festival was a huge success, but the town is not taking a rest, anticipating an Adelaide Symphony Orchestra concert at 11am on Thursday, April 18 in the beautiful Peterborough Town Hall.

One of Peterborough's distinguished sons, the renowned tenor Thomas Edmonds, will also be having a book-signing event on Sunday, April 28 at 2pm in the historic Yongala Hall as he returns for a local launch of "Ev'ry Valley, a Tenor's Journey"

For now, the festival committee has a couple of months to recuperate and get the creative thinking caps on as they prepare for Easter 2025. See you then!

Rural Matters

Next step for goat, sheep ID

THE vital next steps for South Australia's implementation of an electronic identification (eID) traceability system for sheep and farmed goats have been released by the State Government.

Mandatory dates for the commencement of eID - scanning to record movement data to the National Livestock Identification System (NLIS) database - have been set to help the supply chain prepare for South Australia's transition to electronic identification.

Following consultation with the Industry Advisory Committee, processors will need to have scanning in place on January 1 2025, and in saleyards by 1 July 2025.

Minister for Primary Industries and Regional Development, Clare Scriven, said setting the dates would provide processors and saleyard operators with a clear timeline to ensure they were ready to meet the requirements for eID.

"We have worked closely with the Industry Advisory Committee to ensure that saleyards and processors have the time to assess their needs regarding scanning equipment and installation, as well as site alignment and any changes to business practices," Ms Scriven said.

"The eID system for sheep and farmed goats is essential for improved traceability, enabling a quick and efficient biosecurity response if a disease such as Foot and Mouth occurs in Australia.

"It would also ensure that recovery from an outbreak would be quicker and the path to regaining overseas market access would be shorter.

"Ensuring we have the best possible traceability system is crucial to protecting our $4.9 billion livestock industry."

Sheep and goat producers can receive rebates for eID technology like these. Picture: CONTRIBUTED

The new system requires sheep and farmed goats born on or after 1 January 2025 to be identified with an NLIS accredited eID device before leaving their property of birth.

The State and Federal Governments are currently rolling out a $12.8 million eID implementation program in South Australia.

To find out more information about eID, as well as an implementation timeline, visit www.pir.sa.gov.au/eid

Thrill of the chase

MOVIE GUIDE INSIDE

Cover Story

Heat of the moment

After catapulting to fame in 2008 thanks to Packed to the Rafters, these days Jessica McNamee prefers to fly under the radar. The Windcatcher star chats to Siobhan Duck about reunions and the renaissance of Aussie drama

In the line of fire: Jessica McNamee plays fire chief Sharon Cobb in Stan family film Windcatcher.
Cover: Nicholas Chalmers

IN much the same way the cast of Friends is forever bonded by their shared experiences working on the hit series, Jessica McNamee remains close to all her Packed to the Rafters castmates.

"We're all still in touch," she smiles.

"I see a lot of George Houvardas and Hugh Sheridan. We're all in a funny Instagram thread where we send memes to each other.

Rebecca [Gibney] and Erik [Thomson] are in that too. We all still check in with each other often. I saw Zoë [Ventoura] recently on the Gold Coast at a premiere and we had a good chat."

While Gibney, Thomson and Michael Caton were already established household names, the Channel Seven drama made McNamee, Sheridan, Jessica Marais and the rest of the young cast into overnight celebrities when it debuted in 2008.

"It's funny because we were all so young, particularly the kids in the cast," she recalls.

"We didn't know what we were doing. We weren't that good. But it all 'steamrolled' and we all got caught up in it."

McNamee laughs as she recalls running up and down hotel hallways with her bathrobe-clad castmates after the 2009 Logies.

"It was like we were on school camp," she smiles of the event, where Marais, Houvardas and Sheridan were all nominated for awards.

"We were all in our early 20s and just being silly and having so much fun."

It can be hard for some to understand McNamee's experience on Rafters now that we are living in the streaming age.

"People were planning the whole week around their Tuesday nights, when they would get take-out and be home by a certain time to watch that show," she shrugs.

"It's just not the same now. You binge a show in a week, you forget about it and you're on to the next show.

"But we were just in people's living rooms every week. For years."

McNamee found sudden and intense fame overwhelming, noting that Rafters brought her more recognition than any of the big Hollywood films she has subsequently made.

"I was talking about this with a friend at the weekend, who's American," she says.

"They were asking how I got my start [in] my career, and I was like: 'I can't really even explain to you what it was like'.

"It's funny because that [period] was the most recognisable I've ever been, out of everything I've ever done.

Old friends: Pia Miranda and Jessica McNamee in Windcatcher.

"That was also the hardest time in my life in terms of being able to function in a normal existence."

After leaving the show part way through the third season, McNamee looked to further her career in America.

"I kind of ran away," she says thoughtfully.

"I did start working on projects but I was very selective about it. I actually avoided network TV in the States because [Rafters] was on a smaller scale to the kind of notoriety you can get on a network TV show in America – where millions more people would see it – [and] that was so overwhelming to me.

"So, I shied away from any of those shows for a long time."

She has also actively sought out roles which prove she's capable of being more than just the girl next door with small (but memorable) performances in The Meg, Chips, Battle of the Sexes (playing controversial tennis champion Margaret Court) and Mortal Kombat.

She's always keen to find projects that will bring her back to Australia. The first instalment of Mortal Kombat was shot in South Australia during the pandemic and its sequel was shot on the Gold Coast late last year.

From there, she headed to Melbourne to film a small part in the Stan family film Windcatcher.

Although it's not a starring role, McNamee was thrilled to work on Windcatcher, seizing it as an opportunity to show local audiences her funny side.

"On paper, there wasn't a lot to this character," she says of her role as fire chief Sharon Cobb.

"And the great thing was, I could see real potential to – in the same way I did with Margaret Court – make her a really fun, memorable role in the context of the movie."

The movie reunited her with her old friend, Looking for Alibrandi's Pia Miranda. The feel-good family movie follows a young Indigenous boy who dreams of using his natural running talent to beat the bullies at his school sports carnival.

Unlike their first job together, Miranda and McNamee now find themselves some of the most senior cast members, acting alongside child performers Lennox Monaghan, Coco Greenstone and Max Turner.

"So, at this point my first and my last job have been with Pia," she laughs.

"We shot this pilot and it was so sad that it never went [anywhere]. It was called Secretary, and I was the bimbo hottie and she was the buttoned-up secretary. I was 19 at the time.

"It was about four secretaries in a legal office and it had an amazing cast including Susie Porter and Peter O'Brien... it was right when Australian Idol hit and that year reality TV just blew up so a lot of networks went down that route [instead of commissioning new dramas]."

McNamee is glad to see that drama is back on the agenda and that there is such diversity in storytelling, as typified by her two most recent films.

"It was such a nice dichotomy because I was going from this gritty, violent 'Alpha' role in Mortal Kombat that was a huge-budget, huge-scale project and flying down to do this very femme, comedic role on a set that was really intimate and like a family," she explains.

"So, it was the two ends of the spectrum. It was awesome."

PICK OF THE WEEK

Last chance: Tom Hanks and Michael Clarke Duncan.

Friday

THE GREEN MILE
7mate, 7.30pm, MA15+ (1999)

Director Frank Darabont (The Shawshank Redemption) takes on another Stephen King story with this fulsome but laboured drama with a supernatural bent. It follows the relationships and various strange happenings between the guards and inmates of a death-row prison wing in Georgia in 1935. Events are told in flashback from the point of view of retired prison guard Paul Edgecombe (Tom Hanks), mostly concerning towering convict John Coffey (Michael Clarke Duncan), a Boo Radley-like gentle giant on death row who possesses a mysterious power to heal people's ailments. Darabont's unique storytelling powers drive home a four-hour epic that harks back to an era where characters meant more than just sex and special effects. ★★★★

FLIGHTPLAN
7Flix, Saturday, 7.30pm, M (2005)

Put The Forgotten and Panic Room in a blender and the result is this thriller that entertains thanks to Jodie Foster (pictured). She plays ace propulsion engineer Kyle, who's flying from Berlin to New York to lay her dead husband to rest. Travelling in the aircraft she helped design, with young daughter Julia (Marlene Lawston), Kyle dozes off and when she awakens, finds Julia missing. Worse still, Kyle's sanity is called into question when nobody on the flight – including an air marshal (Peter Sarsgaard) and the plane's captain (Sean Bean) – remember the youngster ever being on board. Some dubious twists cause turbulence towards the end, but with Foster in control it's mostly a smooth ride. ★★★

THE BOURNE IDENTITY
7mate, Sunday, 8.30pm, M (2002)

After decades of spy thrillers involving girls, gadgets and little else, the genre received a shot in the arm from director Doug Liman courtesy of this adaptation of the Robert Ludlum bestseller. The riveting yarn kicks off with the discovery of amnesiac Jason Bourne (Matt Damon, pictured). Given no clues to his identity except for the bullet holes in his back and the Swiss bank account number implanted in his hip, the talented Mr Bourne embarks on a mission to discover who he is. ★★★★

TRANSFORMERS: REVENGE OF THE FALLEN
Nickelodeon, Monday, 8.30pm, M (2009)

This inevitable sequel to 2007's crowd-pleaser features just as much metallic fisticuffs and eye-popping pyrotechnics as Terminator Salvation. But where that big-budget bust failed, director Michael Bay's sci-fi actioner succeeds because it's ridiculous in all the right ways. When the devious Decepticons return to Earth, it's once again left to Sam (Shia LeBeouf) and Mikaela (Megan Fox, pictured) to save the day. There's much more to this escapist extravaganza than meets the eye. ★★★

BURLESQUE
ABC TV Plus, Friday, 8.30pm, M (2010)

The familiar tale of a wannabe dancer/singer making it in the big smoke is cranked out one more time in this all-singing, all-dancing divathon. Ali (Christina Aguilera) escapes her backwater town for the bright lights of Los Angeles, landing a job as a bartender at the Burlesque Lounge, run by Tess (Cher, pictured, left, with Aguilera). But Ali doesn't want to stay behind the bar, and soon enough launches her musical career on stage, much to the irritation of jealous performer Nikki (Kristen Bell). Ali's soaring voice restores the club to its former glory, and attracts the attention of bartender Jack (Cam Gigandet). Slick costumes and striking choreography abound. ★★★★

INSTANT FAMILY
Nine, Saturday, 7.30pm, PG (2018)

When Ellie and Pete Wagner (Rose Byrne and Mark Wahlberg, both pictured) look at their lives, something is missing – as their thoughtless relatives constantly remind the childless couple. At an event for potential foster parent-child connections, the Wagners meet Hispanic-American siblings Lizzy (Isabela Merced), Juan (Gustavo Escobar) and Lita (Julianna Gamiz) and jump in the deep end. What happens next is a roller-coaster ride with a very steep learning curve. ★★★★

THE CAMPAIGN
9Go!, Tuesday, 8.30pm, MA15+ (2012)

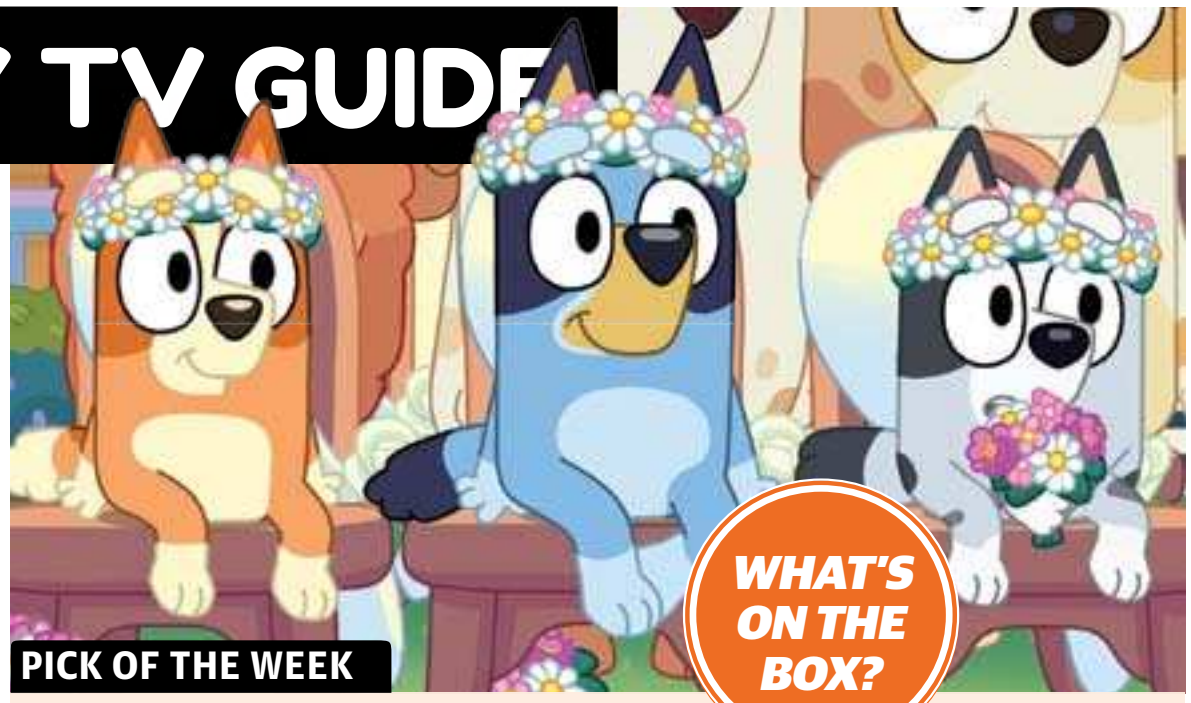

In this slapstick romp that takes aim at the orchestrated and absurd world of American politics, Will Ferrell (pictured) shines as overly competitive Republican congressman Cam Brady who finds his path to re-election hampered by a new candidate, the effeminate Marty (Zach Galifianakis). With over-the-top political ads, mud-slinging and tawdry point-scoring with the public, director Jay Roach (Meet the Parents) turns the dirtiness of this world into laugh-out-loud fodder. ★★★★

YOUR WEEKLY TV GUIDE

THE VANISHING TRIANGLE
SBS, Thursday, 9.20pm

If you can forgive desperate, wide-eyed journo Lisa (Normal People's India Mullen) for repeatedly putting herself in harm's way, without a weapon, capsicum spray or even a butter knife as backup, you can perhaps appreciate this disconcerting finale. A bleak crime thriller based on the real-life disappearances and murders of many Irish women in the 1980s and '90s, it's a disturbing trip back to another place and time where different rules apply. In tonight's revealing yet unsettling finale, David (Downton Abbey's Allen Leech, pictured with Mullen) confronts Gardai's top officials, while Lisa and Brennan (Aaron Monaghan) investigate an abandoned slaughterhouse.

PICK OF THE WEEK

WHAT'S ON THE BOX?

BLUEY
ABC Kids, Sunday, 8am

Wackadoo! A brand new episode of Bluey hits our screens today. And it's a bumper one – running for 28 minutes, it's like four Blueys in one! "The Sign" follows on from last week's cliffhanger "Ghostbasket" and revolves around the wedding of Uncle Radley (Patrick Brammall) and Frisky (Claudia O'Doherty). With Bluey and Bingo spending the day with their cousins – the chaotic Muffin (pictured, right, with Bluey and Bingo) and rambunctious Socks, it's sure to be full of fun and a little bit of silliness. "The Sign" is jam-packed with talent in Megan Washington, Myf Warhurst and Rose Byrne. Making their Bluey debuts are Rove McManus, Deborah Mailman, Brendan Williams and Joel Edgerton.

BARGAIN HUNT
7TWO, Friday, 6pm

In this long-running series, antiques are king, but money is just as paramount. Like the brasher and generally unpredictable sibling of the equally entertaining but ostensibly more refined Antiques Roadshow, heirlooms and relics star, but in this fun-loving game show two teams see who can make the most cash from their op shop/antique lair/market stall haul. This special celebrates 20 years on air and there's a treasure trove of moments to hark back on. Host Charlie Ross (pictured) pounces on the opportunity to get festive with not only blue and red balloons, but also a themed neck tie.

I'M A CELEBRITY... GET ME OUT OF HERE!
10, Wednesday, 7.30pm

This ever-popular reality offering once again has families tuning in to see celebrities undertake stomach-churning trials in order to be fed as they while away the time in the South African jungle. This 10th season has seen Robert Irwin move seamlessly into the hosting role alongside Julia Morris (pictured with Irwin) and has also cast its oldest contestant, with 75-year-old Denise Drysdale joining the jungle shenanigans. After weeks in the jungle with no news from home, tonight the remaining celebrities find out what has been happening in the outside world. Then, the close-knit group will become even smaller as another celebrity is given their marching orders.

NEXT GEN DRAMA

HEARTBREAK HIGH
Streaming from Friday, Netflix

Teenage dream: Chloé Hayden and Ayesha Madon in Heartbreak High.

It might be a little reductive to simply label this exceptional series as a reboot: fresh, frank and a whole lot of fun, this new jaunt into the heart and soul of Hartley High stands proudly on its own two feet. After a stellar debut brimming with turmoil and excitement, the vibrant, diverse and fascinating teenagers (and their teachers) are back with eight episodes.

Resolutely Aussie in its feel, but with a bold, playful spirit similar to the groundbreaking hit Sex Education, creator Hannah Carroll Chapman playfully proclaims this season will "celebrate everything we love about the show: its humour, batshtery, heart and currency – and turn up the volume on all of it".

There's the trials and tribulations of romance and relationships, with breakout star Ayesha Madon's Amerie running for school captain as the notion of heroes and villains is tested. The amusing, destructive and confusing side to manliness is also zeroed in on, with today's expectations on masculinity bravely explored.

Original star Angus Sampson (Bump) is an inspired and exciting addition to the cast as a sports teacher Mr Voss, an old-school authority with zero patience for wokery who is returning from a mysterious leave of absence.

Buffed with a true music lover's soundtrack including fresh tunes (Rihanna, Genesis Owusu, Blood Orange) and nostalgic nods to its '90s genesis (Sugababes, Sophie Hawkins, The Cranberries), this school of hard knocks passes with flying colours. – Rebecca Balloch

THE SYMPATHIZER
Streaming from Monday, Foxtel On Demand

TOM JONES
Streaming, BritBox

Based on Henry Fielding's 1749 satire about an orphan's misadventures and romances, this adaptation starring an endearing Solly McLeod (Outlander) sticks to a comical, melodramatic script. It also features Aussie Sophie Wilde, but it's Ted Lasso's Hannah Waddingham (pictured) as outrageously scheming, lustful Lady Bellaston who outclasses all.

FALLOUT
Streaming, Prime Video

You needn't be a video game buff to be entranced by this post-apocalyptic adaptation. From the creators of sci-fi hit Westworld, this bounty of strange creatures, characters and landscapes stars Yellowjackets' wide-eyed Ella Purnell (pictured) as an optimistic woman who has grown up in an underground vault, emerging to find a strange world.

FRANKLIN
Streaming from Friday, Apple TV+

Michael Douglas (pictured) has perhaps landed the grandest role of his career in this sumptuous miniseries. He's also the executive producer of this eight-episode period drama following inventor Benjamin Franklin's pivotal 1776 trip to France in which he engineered the Franco-American Alliance. Douglas is commanding in this attractive history lesson.

THE GREATEST HITS
Streaming from Friday, Star on Disney+

Like a pop song that inspires a passionate dance and sing-along, this weepie romance doesn't venture too deep. Starring Bohemian Rhapsody's Lucy Boynton (pictured), it's an ode to the power of music, wrapped with a slightly irritating sci-fi twist of time travel and tragedy. With a diverse soundtrack, the inviting hipster look permits a certain charm.

Augusta hospital funding

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL: April 5, 1946

LARGER HOSPITAL GRANT WANTED

COMMITTEE on Delay in Replying to Quorn Requests.

Members of the Quorn District Hospital Committee are seeking an early decision from the Minister of Health (Hon A.L. McEwin) to their request for an increased grant from the Government towards the cost of erecting a new hospital at Quorn.

The case for Quorn has been placed before the Minister in writing and was supported and amplified at a deputation which waited on the Minister last December.

The deputation was representative of the Quorn District Hospital Committee, the Corporation, and the District Council of Kanyaka, and was assisted by Hons. A. Blesing, H. Edmonds and J. M. Beerworth and Lin Riches, MP.

The deputationists referred to the inadequate accommodation for the staff and patients and the serious over crowding at the institution.

This appeal met with a spontaneous response, and over £1,000 was raised in a few weeks.

The committee had selected a site and had plans prepared by a competent architect. These had been approved by the Director General.

The Government had agreed to subscribe £2,000, but the committee had examined the requirements of the district carefully and were unanimously of the opinion that it would be useless to proceed with the proposition unless the Government was prepared to increase its grant to 50 per cent of the cost of the building.

This would be in keeping with the practice generally adopted.

The Government had agreed to contribute 50 per cent of the cost of nurses quarters and kitchen block at Whyalla at a cost of over £50,000.

The Minister had promised to examine the request of the deputation in the light of other commitments and the needs of the district and also in relation to the Commonwealth social services and hospitalisation scheme.

A reply was promised in January.

The chairman of the Committee (Mr. J. McColive) reports that no reply had been received.

The chairman, with Dr. Tippelt, the Town Clerk (Mr. Cooke) and Messrs. B. Chapman and E. Lowe, met the Hon. J. M. Beerworth, MLC, and Mr. Riches, MP, in conference over the weekend and asked the members to press the Government for an early decision.

The members promised that they would take the matter up in Parliament during the present special session and suggested that the Minister and Director be asked to visit Quorn at an early date for the purpose of reaching finality on the matter.

MOVE TO REMODEL WEST SIDE MEMORIAL
MEETING HELD AT PORT AUGUSTA WEST
PLANS SUBMITTED FOR CONSIDERATION

A meeting was convened by Cr. T. Chinnery on Friday night to consider the remodelling or rebuilding of the Soldiers' Memorial in the triangle at Port Augusta West.

For some time the present tablet has been showing signs of wear and when the guns, which were bolted to the base, were removed during the last war, large holes were left in the cement work.

Several names have been removed from the tablet; the screws have been removed from out of the top and it now hangs apart from the mason work.

Plans have been submitted for consideration and those present at the meeting were of the opinion that something should be done to erect, a suitable monument to perpetuate the services rendered by the men who paid the supreme sacrifice.

A further meeting will be called at an early date when it is hoped there will be a representative gathering.

"We will remember them."

FISHERIES INSPECTOR FOR NORTHERN PORTS

Following complaints made on behalf of Port Augusta fishermen regarding the actions of alien fishermen from Port Pirie, the Chief Inspector of Fisheries and Game (Mr. F. W. Moorhouse) has advised Mr. Riches, MP, that it is hoped that the trouble could be overcome by departmental supervision and it was proposed to have an inspector stationed in the north for the next netting season.

The Port Augusta men asked that Pirie fishermen be kept south of a line from Point Lowly to Mambray Creek.

They claim that the men from Pirie, sometimes numbering up to 30, use the waters adjacent to Port Augusta for their fishing.

These men use seine nets in the capture of garfish particularly and there are also mesh nets for the taking of other fish such as mullet and silver whiting.

It is also claimed that some of the visiting men operate beyond the limit of 6 feet at low tide, thus destroying the breeding grounds of the fish and having a serious detrimental effect on the industry.

Mr. Moorhouse said that to accede to the request to constitute the northern waters a closed area would mean that large quantities of valuable fish so badly needed today would not be captured, therefore he could not recommend that it be done.

EASTER TENNIS TOURNEY - WHYALLA PLAYERS TO COMPETE

The forthcoming Easter Tennis tourney continues to create considerable interest in Port Augusta and the surrounding district.

Many of the Whyalla players who were over here last weekend intimated that they will make the trip. Nominations close on Saturday, April 13.

The committee would be grateful if intending donors sent in their trophies, etc. without delay, as arrangements have been made to make a big display in Mr. Tucker's shop window on Monday next.

SOAP BUBBLES DISTURB CRICKETERS

While fielding at the Central Oval on Saturday last, Davenport cricketers noticed some strange objects floating past their heads and across the ground at a height of about 6 feet.

After they had recovered from their surprise, the cricketers discovered the objects, which created an unusual sight in the sun's rays, were soap bubbles about the size of a ball.

As the nearest residence is some hundreds of yards from the oval, the bubbles must have travelled a long distance.

Shark, sailors target Pirie

THE RECORDER: APRIL 1, 1946

SHARK TACKLES RUDDER OF FISHING BOAT

A shark estimated at more than 20ft in length wrenched the rudder from a 28-ft fishing boat off Point Lowly about midday yesterday, flinging it high in the air, and savagely tackled it in the water—all out of spite, according to two Pirie men who were in the boat.

The fishermen were Mr. G. Nardelli jun, of David Street, Pirie West, and his father, Mr G. Nardelli, sen, who left Pirie on Friday night for a week-end fishing trip in Spencer Gulf and returned late yesterday afternoon with the unusual story.

The two men had been fishing all the morning off Point Lowly, in about 15 fathoms and had been making a good haul of schnapper.

The presence of a shark was first noticed when fish began to disappear with parts of the lines before they could be hauled in.

When the monster came to the surface and flashed its tail above the water the two men were amazed at its size.

They estimated its length at more than 20 ft. and the width of its tail at more than 2ft 9in from tip to tip.

When Mr Nardelli, sen., hooked a "double-header" (two fish on the one line) the shark attacked the lower fish, devoured it with lightning speed, and was on the tail of the other.

But Mr. Nardelli hauled in the other fish before it could be reached by the greedy jaws.

The men then felt a bump at the stern of the boat and in the next moment saw the rudder, which is about 5 ft. 6 ins. high and 2 ft. 9 ins. wide, hurled, about 10 ft. in the air.

It landed several yards from the boat.

"The shark went after it like a mad dog," said Mr. Nardelli, jun.

"It sank its teeth into the 1 ¼ in. board and began worrying the rudder viciously."

When the rudder was recovered later, about quarter of a mile away, the fishermen saw where the shark's teeth had almost penetrated through the thick board. It was not otherwise damaged.

Mr. Nardelli, jun. said that the rudder, which weighs about 1 cwt, was fixed to the stem by pintles, and was easily removable.

WORD IN SEASON TO SOME BOYS IN BLUE

When a unit of His Majesty's Australian Navy arrived in Pirie on Friday it brought with it a complement of young fellows whom, all things being normal, the townspeople are quite proud to know.

Unfortunately, however, a few of the ratings allowed, their exuberance to overcome their sense of balance, and for a few hours they sought to take charge of the place.

In the main streets at night there were some distasteful scenes.

Still fresh in the mind is the visit three months ago of H.M.A.S. Pirie and the unimpeachable deportment of its crew, a bearing which took all the men into the hearts and homes of Pirieans.

That reception will be repeated in the case of the present unit provided the moderate majority can place a leash on the small minority which "stirred up" the town on Friday night.

For the benefit of the latter let us say that Pirie is no smug town which shudders when a leaf stirs or raises its hands in horror if the fighting man indulges in a little celebration upon relaxation of discipline.

But its people have a keen sense of the fitness of things, and its community spirit is founded on sportsmanship. It has no use for the man or youth who, with, or without the fortification of various potent beverages, seeks to create disturbance and make himself a general nuisance.

After what the world has been through in the past six years it is not easy to write in admonitory strain, about any branch of the fighting services, to whom we owe so much.

But in the present case we have in mind that the unit now visiting our port is expected to be in these waters for some time, and thus we leave with the lads of the minority a word of advice — that if they will "play ball" while ashore they will find Pirie a good place in which to move.

It is to be hoped that the disciplinary action taken by the ship's authorities will render groundless any fear that Friday's unsavory exhibition was to be a recurring practice.

Whyalla water prices drop

WHYALLA NEWS: APRIL 5, 1946

PIPELINE WATER WILL CHARGES BE REDUCED?

Questions in the Assembly

THE Minister of Works, Mr. M. Mcintosh, replied in the Assembly to a series of seven questions asked by Mr. L. G. Riches on the subject of a reduction in water charges at Whyalla.

He said a reply had been received that the Federal Government was prepared to bring the additional loss involved in a reduction within the scope of the existing agreement "provided that the maximum annual contribution by the Commonwealth remains at the present figure".

An investigation was now being made into the present and probable effect of that limitation.

Mr. Mcintosh added that the matter of a cheaper water supply had been discussed verbally with directors of The Broken Hill Pty Co. Ltd.

The government's views had been placed before the company which had not yet given its decision.

Asked if it was the intention of the Government to take over the reticulation of water at Whyalla the Minister replied that the present scheme and charge operated in pursuance of an Act of Parliament, and, even if agreement was arrived at between the Commonwealth Government and the B.H.P. the State Government could not take over the reticulation until the matter had been investigated by the Public Works Committee and amending legislation had been passed by Parliament.

Asked if the Government had agreed to supply water to Whyalla Town Commission for town beautification at prices comparable with charges in other municipalities Mr. Mcintosh said that negotiations had been opened with the company and would be continued.

The secretary of Whyalla branch of A.L.P. has received a letter from Mr. Edgar Russell M.H.R. stating that the Minister for Post-War Reconstruction, Mr. J. J. Dedman, had informed him that following his representations the agreement fixing the charges for water at Whyalla would be further considered.

A meeting convened by Whyalla branch of the Communist Party to discuss water charges will be held at Whyalla South reserve next Sunday at 2.30 p.m.

REDUCTION IN WATER CHARGE

R. R, Loveday, Commissioner for East Ward, writes:— "It is agreed on all sides that there has been unnecessary delay in dealing with this matter.

The approach to it should be one of close co-operation with the Commission in its efforts to achieve what all Whyalla townspeople desire, irrespective of party.

The facts are, as shown by the official correspondence and records, that Mr. Riches moved in the House of Assembly to reduce charges for water in Whyalla over 18 months ago.

The Commission did not come into the picture until immediately after its formation, a letter being sent to the Minister for Works, Mr. Mcintosh, on 28/5/45.

The matter was said to be receiving attention and the Commission wrote again on 18/7/45.

Another reply of a similar character was received, and, after another wait, I was informed that it was probable that the original petition was not receiving recognition.

The Commission decided to circulate another petition, and at this stage Mr. Riches, who had been consistently pursuing the matter in the House, paid the Commission a special visit to report and advise on the whole matter.

He felt it would be inadvisable to send the second petition at that stage and the same night, 19/11/45 the Commission decided to send the Chairman in person to interview the Minister.

He attended with Messrs. Riches and Blesing and it was, as a result of this visit, that things began to move.

We were advised that - the Commonwealth Government would have to be approached in regard to their part of the contract in regard to water.

Since this point in the proceedings there has been considerable correspondence between the Commission, the Minister, Mr. Russell and Commonwealth Minister, culminating in the Minister's reply to Mr. Riches this week that he understood the Premier had received a reply from the Commonwealth Government, but that the reply had not been considered by Cabinet.

On the House of Assembly Notice Paper for April 2 Mr. Riches as a number of questions on the matter.

It should be noted that the evidence indicates that practically nothing was done in the way of necessary action by the Minister until the Chairman of the Commission waited on him on November 23 1945.

On that occasion the Minister promised to visit Whyalla and explain the position if it were not possible for anything to be done in the matter of a reduction in water charges.

In view of the fact that we are now reaching the stage where a definite reply appears close, there appeared to be no good reason for acceding to the request that we take immediate steps to arrange a public meeting on the question. Little can be gained by getting the Minister here until the position, insofar as the Commonwealth Government is concerned, has been determined.

The Commission advised the secretary of the Whyalla branch, Australian Communist Party on 12/3/46 that when the time is opportune and appropriate the Commission will act as they have already resolved and convene such a meeting.

In view of the circumstances outlined in this letter I leave the public to judge whether there is any justification for the insinuation contained in the last issue of the "Tribune"—"It is interesting to note that, it was the A.L.P. Town Commissioners who moved the rejection of the petition.

At the same time, they made no proposals for a cheaper water supply."

WHYALLA ATHLETES IN STAWELL GIFT

With the publication of the Stawell Gift handicaps interest has turned to the chances of Whyalla runners, annexing the big prize.

The handicapper has taken no risk with the local athletes. Perc O'Loughlin is easily the best handicapped South Australian.

If he can improve a yard or so on his Whyalla Gift performance he will be a definite danger.

Ron Mutton is running better now than at any other time in his career, but would appear to be too far back.

Jim Travers has been liberally treated in the Stawell 440 and it would not surprise to see him in the final of this event.

Popular Bill McEwen had a notable success last week end when he won the Booleroo Sheffield of 20 pound and sash.

Another local in Claire Travers was runner-up. Claire was also successful in the 100 yards sprint.

It is interesting to note that of the last five big Sheffields run in South Australia, Whyalla boys have won three, been second twice and third once.

HOROSCOPE by Lilith

Your week ahead

This week's last hurrah for 2024 in out-there Aries invites us to cut loose and experiment: physically, mentally, emotionally, creatively. To walk on the wild side with bolder, more playful choices. To reach out, make the first move, don't hold back...

ARIES
(Mar 21 - Apr 20)

With massive cosmic energy switching on the ignition of your imagination, this is a good week to ask: What new approach is possible here? And be satisfied with micro steps and bite-sized wins until 26 April when Mercury in your sign hits the heavenly highway again.

Best day:
Friday 19 April

TAURUS
(Apr 21 - May 20)

Is something that ought to be pleasurable stressing you out? Life could be a whole lot easier if you release a bit of control, relinquish insisting on doing things your way; perhaps try delegating. As a Tauran you know how to take your time and let things evolve organically.

Best day:
Saturday 20 April

GEMINI
(May 21 - Jun 21)

It's worth cultivating a discovery mindset this week. Listening with a fresh and receptive perspective as if you're hearing things for the first time. Though with your planet mentor Mercury still in reverse mode, best wait till next week to get those exciting new ideas up and running.

Best day:
Sunday 14 April

CANCER
(Jun 22 - Jul 22)

This is looking like a week where making sacrifices might be a recipe for resentment. So better to use it as a golden opportunity to practice letting go of holding on. Draw from Venus' creative well and keep conversations focussed on what you do want, not what you don't.

Best day:
Monday 15 April

LEO
(Jul 23 - Aug 23)

With April cranking up your entrepreneurial enthusiasm, others will be attracted to what you're offering. This week Venus asks: How can you bring more pleasure into your daily life without unbalancing the stability you've worked so hard for? By starting with micro moves rather than grand gestures.

Best day:
Thursday 18 April

VIRGO
(Aug 24 - Sep 22)

With your guiding planet Mercury spinning retrograde till April 26, this week could see complex interpersonal dynamics and group in-fighting, in which case clarify commitments and deadlines. Look for solutions that minimize stress levels. Someone from your past might lend a helping hand.

Best day:
Tuesday 16 April

LIBRA
(Sep 23 - Oct 23)

Expect fireworks, steam and a lot of creativity this week, which alternates between frenetic forward motion and cautious back-pedalling. Both Venus and Saturn are supporting a balance of beautiful and functional, so use the Venus side of your brain for artistry and the Saturn side for systematic thinking.

Best day:
Friday 19 April

SCORPIO
(Oct 24 - Nov 22)

All relationships are mirrors, and the current celestial climate can be quite fierce. If this week brings some tough love wake-up calls in the form of unfiltered feedback, or colleagues or close connections reflect back unflattering or confronting images, view these as an opportunity for evolution.

Best day:
Wednesday 17 April

SAGITTARIUS
(Nov 23 - Dec 21)

Sagittarian patience with red tape is notoriously short, so pace yourself before you spontaneously combust. Trying to force situations to meet your expectations has been a source of stress for you in the past, so why keep repeating that pattern? Use this week's Mercury retro to flip the script.

Best day:
Thursday 18 April

CAPRICORN
(Dec 22 - Jan 20)

Your savviest strategy right now is staying in cruise control until the planets move to a more Capricorn-friendly element next week. Until then, work at refining raw ideas and getting assembly lines prepped, and don't forget to reward yourself with your favourite kind of treat.

Best day:
Saturday 20 April

AQUARIUS
(Jan 21 - Feb 18)

You're not required to have all the answers this week, just ask the right questions to figure out how to work smarter, not harder, and have more time for fun. Let your wild and carefree side out to play to attract the kind of colourful characters who excite and delight you.

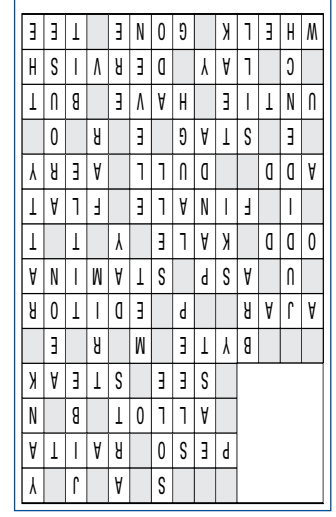

Best day:
Sunday 14 April

PISCES
(Feb 19 - Mar 20)

Saturn sounds the call for some long-term planning this week, as in getting your inner desires and outer world in synch. And Mars adding extra muscle to your hustle can motivate you to finally get a lot of that stuff you've been procrastinating about ticked off the to-do list.

Air Fryer Mini Egg Meatloaf

Prep time: 15 minutes
Cook time: 25 minutes
Serves: 4
Difficulty: Easy

Ingredients:

- 5 small eggs
- 500g regular beef mince
- 1 cup wholemeal fresh breadcrumbs
- 1 small onion, grated
- 2 cloves garlic, crushed
- 1 carrot, grated (150g)
- ⅓ cup shredded parmesan plus extra for garnish (45g)
- ½ cup finely chopped parsley plus extra for garnish
- ⅓ cup smokey barbecue sauce
- Mixed salad leaves and medley cherry tomatoes, to serve

Method:

1. Place four eggs into a medium saucepan. Cover with cold water and bring to the boil, boil for 3 minutes (because eggs are small). Drain and cool in cold water until completely cold. Peel and set aside.
2. Combine mince, breadcrumbs, onion, garlic, carrot, parmesan, parsley, 1 tablespoon sauce and remaining egg. Season with salt and pepper. Mix well with clean hands until thoroughly combined. Divide mixture evenly to create four large balls. Make an opening and stuff one boiled egg into the centre of each meatloaf. Reshape the balls into loaf shapes.
3. Place loaves into an oiled air fryer basket. Cook at 180C for 10 minutes. Spoon barbecue sauce over the top of each loaf and cook at 180C for a further 8 minutes, or until mince is cooked through.
4. Serve with salad leaves and tomatoes.

Tips & Hints:

- Use small eggs for centre of meatloaves as large eggs can cause the loaf to split open.
- Alternately, meatloaves can be cooked in an 200C (fan-forced) oven for 15 minutes. Glaze and return to the oven for a further 10 minutes.

Lemon Curd Bombe Alaska

Prep time: 30 mins
Cook time: 15 minutes
Serves: 8
Difficulty: Easy

Ingredients:

Lemon Curd

- 4 egg yolks (reserve egg whites for meringue)
- ½ cup (110g) caster sugar
- 2 tsp finely grated lemon zest
- ½ cup (125ml) lemon juice (approx. 2 lemons)
- 125g chilled butter, diced

Bombe Alaska

- 2 litres vanilla ice cream
- 125g punnet raspberries, extra raspberries to serve
- 1 unfilled pre-made vanilla sponge cake*
- 1 cup caster sugar
- 4 Reserved egg whites from Curd

Method:

Lemon Curd

1. Combine egg yolks, sugar, lemon zest and juice in a large heatproof microwave-safe bowl. Whisk until combined.
2. Add the diced butter and place onto the microwave turntable. Follow manufacturer's instructions to reduce microwave power to 50%. Cook uncovered for 7-10 minutes, stirring every minute until mixture is thick enough to coat the back of a wooden spoon. (See tips)
3. Cover the curd surface with plastic wrap to prevent it from forming a skin. Let cool to room temperature, then refrigerate overnight until cold.

Bombe Alaska

1. Line an 8-cup capacity pudding tin with two layers of offset plastic wrap making sure it hangs well over the edges.
2. Scoop ice cream into a large bowl. Allow to soften for 5 minutes. Use a hand-held electric mixer to beat ice cream until smooth but not melted. Place a large spoonful of the ice cream into the base of tin. Place a heaped spoonful of curd on top and another spoonful of ice cream and spread into the edges with spoon.
3. Pour remaining lemon curd on top of remaining ice cream in the bowl. Scoop spoonfuls of curd and ice cream into tin until half full, using the back of a spoon to smooth surface as you go. Sprinkle with half of the raspberries. Top with remaining ice cream and curd the same way and smooth surface. Sprinkle with remaining raspberries.
4. Place 1 single unfilled sponge on top and press down onto ice cream. Cover with plastic wrap or lid and place in the freezer overnight.
5. Allow reserved egg whites to come to room temperature. Combine egg whites and sugar in a large heatproof bowl. Rest over a large saucepan of gently simmering water. Use a hand-held mixer to beat for 5 minutes or until soft white peaks form. Remove bowl from the heat and continue to beat for a further 5 minutes or until thick peaks form. Allow to cool to room temperature.
6. Pull ice cream out of pudding tin and invert onto serving plate. Remove plastic wrap. Use a metal spatula to swirl cooled meringue all over. Use a kitchen blow torch to scorch the meringue. Freeze overnight, uncovered. Cut into wedges to serve.

Tips:

- Refrigerate reserved egg whites overnight but allow them to come to room temperature before making meringue.
- Use unfilled sponges are available in supermarkets. The remaining sponge can be frozen for another use or consumed.
- Make your own sponge from scratch using our classic recipe: https://www.australianeggs.org.au/recipes-and-cooking/traditional-sponge-cake-with-jam-and-cream.
- Covering with meringue, blow torching then freezing will free up time on Christmas Day and ice cream will be a lot firmer than if covered with meringue before serving. Meringue doesn't go hard in freezer so it is fine to cut through.

Lemon Curd

- When making the curd, begin checking the thickness of the curd at 6 minutes cooking time.
- Dip a spoon into the curd then run your finger over the back of it. If it leaves a clean line in the curd, it's cooked enough and ready to cool.
- Microwaves vary in type, wattage and size, so cooking times may vary. Use cooking times as a guide.
- Curd will thicken as it cools.
- Spoon into a container, cover and refrigerate for up to 2 weeks.

Helping Hand

Clinical Nurse
Port Pirie, full time

- Competitive salary plus generous salary packaging options
- Professional development opportunities

Helping Hand has been a leading provider of aged care in communities across South Australia since 1953. That's a long journey, and we're proud of our stability and strength.

An exciting opportunity is available for an experienced and progressive Clinical Nurse to join our team at Lealholme, our Port Pirie Residential Care Home.

As a Clinical Nurse, you will lead a diverse team of registered nurses, enrolled nurses and care workers to ensure high quality, person-centred services are delivered to residents. You are a leader that has highly developed clinical and critical thinking skills to efficiently coordinate and deliver resident care in collaboration with the other health professionals whilst maximising efficient use of resources.

The application of that knowledge and experience ensures resident's needs are met and clinical standards are maintained within the multidisciplinary team environment. You'll also make an impact by:

- Coordinating effective assessment, planning, delivery and ongoing evaluation of care and service to residents
- Assisting the Care Services Manager and Residential Services Manager to ensure excellence in the delivery of care through daily clinical triage and assessment
- As a leader you are an integral member of the leadership team and will work collaboratively to ensure we meet resident's needs
- You are a born teacher, increasing the knowledge and skills of staff in the clinical setting including providing support, guidance, and education to new graduates and junior clinicians

A Bachelor of Nursing qualification and current AHPRA registration is required. All applicants must have the right to work in Australia and have a valid NDIS Worker Screening clearance or be willing to obtain one. Visa sponsorship may be offered to qualified RNs for Port Pirie, Whyalla, Clare, and Jamestown.

Registered Nurse
Port Pirie, full time (two positions)

- Competitive salary plus generous salary packaging options
- Professional development opportunities

Are you looking for a change in your nursing career? A new role which allows you to build meaningful relationships and make a real difference?

Aged care is so important. Some people forget that. You don't and neither do we. Because helping people is what we were born to do.

Here, every moment matters and every resident counts. And so do you.

Exciting opportunities are available for Registered Nurses to join our team at Lealholme, our Port Pirie Residential Care Home.

As a Registered Nurse, you will deliver direct and comprehensive care to our residents, while leading and supporting a team of Enrolled Nurses and Residential Care Workers.

You'll also make an impact by:

- Using evidence-based approaches to deliver quality clinical care to residents
- Ensuring assigned resident care is performed in line with care standards and Helping Hand policies and procedures
- Conducting assessments, reviews, coordinate care plans and medical/clinical interventions
- Liaising with family members, doctors, care workers and allied health professionals to support the wellbeing of the residents

Demons fall to table leader

JOHN BELLIFEMINI

PORT PIRIE - The Northern Demons lost to State League 2 ladder leader Adelaide University 0-2 in its Byrne Park round six game on Saturday, this time finding itself chasing two goals at the halftime break unlike the previous week ehen it led before losing its away fixture to Cove FC.

Reds coach Omar Hassan now stares at consecutive defeats and against opposition that are the benchmarks of the competition.

The fifth ranked Demons dropped a spot on the ladder after its loss to University and apart from the top three, there now is just four points separating third and eleventh teams on the ladder.

There is no doubt the latest two league game defeats suffered by the Reds has dented its aspirations and their general soccer is probably not up to scratch, but the Demons still need to play its cancelled fixture against Port Adelaide.

On Saturday, the visiting Adelaide University got off to a bright start with Hugh Remington scoring at the 10th minute and Andrew Orphanou making it 2-0 at the 28th minute as the visitors took that lead into the halftime break.

The two goals came from cross balls into the Demons box that the home team could not defend in an opening half where Adelaide University proved the better of the two.

Reports suggest Saturday's opponent was better than Cove FC the previous week.

Expectations of a strong second half Demons revival never eventuated although the home team was able to keep its opponents scoreless in a contest that the Reds again failed to score where needed most.

The two early games at Byrne Park saw the Demons lose both with the Reserves defeated 0-2 by Adelaide University and the Under 18 side losing 2-5 with Ethan Franklin being the sole goal scorer for the Byrne

Park teams in round six soccer.

Best players - Demons – J Koumitzis, A Saniel, D Cox, I BNargomwa.

Goal scorers - Adelaide University - H Rimington, A Orphanou.

PREVIEW

The Northern Demons have progressed to near its probable best in top flight cup competition and this saturday afternoon will host the SAASL best team going around in Elizabeth Downs and recent "three-peat" top division premiership winner.

The Demons have already bettered last season's close defeat against NPL team Adelaide Olympic by defeating another in the strong Para Hills Knights several weeks ago 3-0 at the Paddocks.

It will be the Reds third cup-tie before A-League teams join this season's Australia Cup and national competition.

Last week's league soccer result saw the Demons lose its second straight game whereas the Downs opened its SAASL Premier Division season against Modbury SC with a 1-1 draw with both goals scored in late injury time at Argana Park.

This Saturday the State League 2 Northern Demons will be out to avoid a hat-trick of losses as the SAASL formidable Downs outfit will be out to win after it's draw last Sunday.

This will be an interesting cup-tie for both.

Tough start for Savoy in season opener

JOHN BELLIFEMINI

THE Vincent DeGioia coached Savoy surprisingly showed some ordinary form and lacked match day grit against a Tea Tree Gully team that dictated terms for long periods for a 2-3 loss in last Sunday's opening season fixture of the SAASL Premier Division.

Savoy stormed home in the last 20 minutes when it found some mojo, albeit all too late, and in the final minute should have shared the points.

The Green and White selected its normal best combination but soon found the Gully a quick, physical and quite skilful outfit that called the shots and surprised the visitors at Tilley Reserve.

Savoy did not start well, especially when Tea Tree Gully was awarded a penalty that Jacob Williams converted at the fourth minute before Samuel Spadavecchia equalized five minutes later with an accurate 20 metre free-kick for 1-1.

The second period saw Gully extend its lead to 3-1 before the introduction of young Jack DeGioia, who replaced Mason Bauman, opened avenues and gave the visitors exciting new run on the opposition goals.

Savoy's Johnny Librino curled ball into the Gully net gave the side renewed hope before the final minutes saw visitors storm the home goals with Spadavecchia hitting the bar and Rhys Gillett missing with the rebound ball for 2-3 finish.

The two early games saw the Savoy Reserves lose 1-2 and the new C Grade team losing 0-9.

Best players - Tea Tree Gully: T. Green, J.Williams. L.Miller; Savoy: J.Librino, S.Spadavecchia, E,Sabamana, J.Scoot.

PREVIEW

Savoy is expected to show improvement this Sunday at the Sports Precinct when it hosts Salisbury Inter in round two of SAASL Premier Division soccer, especially after dropping all points last week in the season opener against Tea Tree Gully.

The Green and White did not play well against Gully, losing 2-3, and never showed consistency all afternoon.

Itts opponents Salisbury Inter also lost 0-2 to Para Hills West, but last season Inter did upset Savoy at the Sports Precinct in round 16, winning 1-0 after having lost 0-5 early in Adelaide.

For coach Vincent DeGioia this Sunday's fixture will be all about winning and display much improvement than its opening season game.

And should Savoy start Sunday's game like it finished last week, one expects the Green and White can win this game and find confidence.

McAuliffe in debut

PORT Augusta footballer Kane McAuliffe made his debut for Richmond at the Gather Round match against St Kilda on the weekend.

McAuliffe had a quiet game, managing four disposals, three tackles and a clearance.

Taken at pick 40 in the 2023 AFL Draft, McAuliffe has worked hard to make his football dream come true, first playing his junior football with Central Augusta and then playing for North Adelaide in the South Australian Football League.

In 2022, McAuliffe was selected for the AFL Academy, where he played against the Carlton VFL side as well as the Port Adelaide SANFL side.

The mid fielder hobbled from the field with about 10 minutes left on the clock during the nail-biting game played at Norwood Oval on the weekend.

The club has reported McAuliffe had an ankle injury and was likely to have a test later this week to ensure his availability.

Kane McAuliffe made his debut for Richmond at the Gather Round game against St Kilda.

LACHLAN SMITH

REGION - Spencer Gulf Football League president Les Promnitz, who is going into his eighth season as league president, says plans for the upcoming 2024 season have been going well, with the board have a final meeting this week before the opening round this Saturday.

"We do not expect any hurdles or any obstacles to get in our way, which is good," Promnitz said.

All of the club's presidents are a part of the league board, and the group has been meeting on a regular basis.

"Now we have got our first game coming up and we are just making sure that we have got all our boxes ticked," Promnitz said.

The president said there were areas the league had to ensure were set before the 2024 season started, which included the administration, and ensuring there were enough people working together on the ground during game days.

"We want to get everyone back on board, we have got a really good supporter base, all the clubs have got them," Promnitz said.

He said attendances at games have been great across the board, and was hoping to see that trend continue.

Promnitz said the opening round between West and Sollys would be an interesting one to watch, as Sollys had played in last year's grand final while West was striving to not finish bottom of the ladder this season.

Reigning premiers Lions and third placed South will go head-to-head.

"Souths have a new coach this year with Kriston Thompson, and he has recruited as well," Promnitz said.

Which leaves Port and Central facing off in the opening round.

Promnitz said Port had carried out some recruiting, while Central had been "a little quiet" on that front.

"We will find that out and see what happens on the weekend and we look forward to some really good games," he said.

The president said the opening round would give people an idea on which teams have improved and which ones have work to do.

He said new South's coach Thompson had been playing for the club for some time and had also coached the Spencer Gulf League side and the Northern City team.

"He has some pedigree coaching in the background which is great," Promnitz said.

All other head coaches from last season will remain the same in 2024.

The president said the league was looking forward to holding its Anzac Day round, as each club will be involved.

"We try to have it so they are like local derbies," Promnitz said.

This year the Anzac Round will involve South taking on West at Port Augusta, Port hosting the Lions at Port Pirie and Sollys tackling Central.

Each club will wear their Anzac Day guernsey during that special round, and the best on ground will be presented with an Anzac Day Medal by their RSL club president.

"We look forward to the Anzac Day round, it is a very important round to us," Promnitz said.

Mr Promnitz said he would also love to see more umpires sign up with the league this season.

"We are always looking for people," he said.

"There is some basic training that needs to be carried out and then the umpires train on a Thursday night."

MID NORTH CHRISTIAN COLLEGE

ON Thursday March 28 Mid North Christian College held its annual Athletics Day.

The day had good conditions for the event, very sunny and bright.

The day was a lot of fun and a great day for the school community to come together.

Delicious food and drinks were provided by our Parents and Friends Group and Mrs Belinda Dick.

All funds raised from this will be donated to Gershibon Christian School in Uganda.

The day had a lot of highlights such as the annual 100 metre Parent Sprint Race which was run and won with lots of parents joining in the fun.
